TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber

January 18th, 1915.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor Alexander in the chair.

Present—Reeve Denison and Councillors Walters, Wiseman, Waller, Carson and Graham.

The minutes of the last regular session were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from Mr. W. G. Wilson on behalf of his client, Mr. Hugh Duncan, jr., claiming damages for injuries sustained by reason of his skating into a crack in the ice on the river just opposite the Disposal Works. The young man was skating home from Deseronto on the evening of the 13th inst., when the accident happened. It appears that the flow of water from the Disposal Works has kept a long lane in the river from freezing over, extending from the shore pretty well out to the channel. The claim is made that the town is responsible for accidents because it had not properly guarded the spot.

Referred to the Town Solicitor for a legal opinion.

A communication was read from the officials of the Hospital for Sick Children announcing that a child of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Castaldi, residents of Napanee, was being cared for at that institution, and as the father claims he is unable to pay for its maintenance, the town will be asked to bear the expense, namely, $1.00 per day during the stay of the child in the hospital. The statutes make it compulsory for the town to pay.

The communication was ordered filed, and the clerk was instructed to write the hospital officials for information concerning the case and the length of time the child will likely be in the hospital.

A communication was read from G. B. Curran asking the council for the use of the town hall on the afternoon and evening of February 10th.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture is co-operating with the Dominion Department of Agriculture to hold a series of Patriotic and Production meetings throughout Ontario, and February 10th is the date when speakers will visit Napanee.

Request granted.

A communication was read from the Kingston General Hospital soliciting a grant from the town for that institution.

On motion of Councillor Waller and Reeve Denison a grant of $150.00 will be made.

A communication from the National Sanitarium Association soliciting a grant was ordered filed.

A by-law was passed appointing Mr. John Lowry Street Commissioner for the year 1915, at a salary of $400 per annum.

A by-law was passed appointing Mr. Geo. A. Cliffe assessor for the year 1915, at a salary of $200.

On motion of Councillors Waller and Carson, the clerk was instructed to

DR. GORDON'S CAMPAIGN OPENS AT GRACE CHURCH

An audience that filled the church gallery and all, greeted the celebrated trio at 7.45 Wednesday evening.

Mr. Mulligan stepped on the platform and announced the first solo and then for a quarter of an hour the church rang with cheery singing after which Mr. Sellery read the 41st Psalm and led in prayer. Then J. Greenlaw sang his first number, "Beyond the gates of Paradise," though suffering from a cold, received in Belleville, his deep, rich voice rang out in charming fullness. It was an inspiration to all to listen to such a voice and spirit. Rev. J. Howard, in one of his happy speeches, introduced Dr. Gordon to the audience and the celebrated Doctor entered on his subject in his characteristic style that allows no sleep moments to enter into any of his meetings. The subject was, "The greatest mistake in the life of a young man," and had many lessons of great value to the audience as to the community. The meetings will be continued every night next week with two great meetings on Sunday one for men only, at four p.m., Trinity Church, and a mass meeting at 8.30 in the same place. A uni choir will assist in the singing.

W. C. T. U. ITEMS.

We regret we have not the space for the letter from Mr. Forgie, Y. C. A. representative at Salisbury Plain, to Mr. Copeland, Secretary.

He writes that it is gratifying to note that many of the boys who came to sing rag-time and then gave away before our services, now remain throughout and are the best supporters of our religious meetings, and is much easier to hold the crowd when "rag-time Joe", as the boys call him, stays to sing hymns and joins the choir. Sometimes he has platform full of concert artists leading the hymn-singing and he adds "I trust that the volume of prayer offered for these men, and our work among them may not be in the least slackened because of the length of time we are remaining here. I feel certain that the great power brought into play alone accounts for the work accomplished so far and hopes that greater results be ahead of us."

After paying tribute to the chieftains, "who so staunchly support their programme," he adds: "If all possible for the Council to add man it would be a good plan to do so at once."

He is the only man with two badges of four battalions each and there really should be a man to each battalion.

Mr. Davis is an American and writes from an American's view point, and he says, "Germany is defying the rules of war and the rules of humanity. — and for us to maintain a neutral attitude of mind is unworthy, and the attitude of a coward." "Had President Wilson seen this war he would never have written his letter." Mr. Davis was present at the burning of Louvain, the bombardment of Rheims, and the battle of Soissons. He was arrested as a spy and narrowly escaped death. His book is thrilling from preface to finish. Get a copy here.

LULL BEFORE STORM

Hard Fighting Is in Prospect Soissons District.

Storms in Belgium Prevent Everything But Artillery Duels as Weather Has Checked Operations in the South, But Germans Have Brought Up Picked Regiments Before Soissons.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The omission from the German official report of any reference to Soissons, the scene of the recent marked German success and the French statement that the had been no change in that region leads to the belief that a renewal of the violent struggle there is impending, the temporary quiet being due to the fact that neither side cares to risk an offensive in the present circumstances.

At widely separated points elsewhere on the western front there have been engagements, but the weather again playing an important part. The storm in Belgium prevents operations except artillery duels, and snow the Vosges, at the other extremity of the line, makes fighting exceedingly difficult.

In the Argonne, however, the fighting is almost continuous, and each side claims minor successes. For a time being the Germans seem to have more on the offensive than the defense.

The Morning Post correspondent of the department of the Oise, writes:

"I have left the region of Soissons where any immediate break through by the Germans appears unlikely for the near future. It is not so much that the Aisne is in flood, but that the most feasible passage for them is the heart of the town. This, of course involves considerable preliminary street fighting, always a long and murderous business. I understand that the continued bombardment working further havoc in the place but as all entrance is denied to civilians, I cannot speak of what cannot be allowed to see. Yet the Germans will probably prefer the street fighting, for they have brought up their picked Prussian regiment. Any attempt to cross the river at any point further east would bring the advancing troops under a heavy artillery fire. While holding parts of the northern suburbs, they may be expected to wait a day or two before attempting a coup.

"Journeying eastward along the Aisne, things do not improve, because, in point of fact, we are just as we were last September, and are not in direct contact with the main German positions at any point. It is mostly a matter of outpost skirmishing with an artillery duel which is going on all the time along the Aisne valley. There is now a series of stone heaps where once there were villages. The havoc wrought has been terrible and is still going on."

An eye-witness with the French army gives a summary of the operations in the west. He says:

"The period from Jan. 5 to 15 has been like the preceding period, marked by wretched weather conditions—rain, snow, wind and fog, and mud. As a consequence the operations have slackened. The events worthy of note are:

"First, the extension and strengthening of our successful operations on the right bank of the Yser between St. Georges and the sea. The German offensive in this region has broken itself on the Yser; we have on the other hand, gained a broad open space beyond the river.

"Second, the fighting near Soissons.

Dr. Maloney, district medical officer of health for Brockville district, said yesterday that he would call on the provincial sanitary engineer, F. A. Dallyn of Toronto, to investigate the entire local typhoid situation and report his findings.

STRENGTH IN EXCITEMENT.

Either Fear, Rage or Pain Starts the Adrenal Glands to Work.

Many a person has wondered where he obtained the strength that enabled him to undergo some emergency that called for unusual physical exertion when under ordinary conditions he would be unable to control a tithe of that strength. It was from the adrenal glands, two little glands situated above the kidneys which secrete what is known as adrenaline and when stimulated discharge the same into the blood. The effect of this addition to the blood is to release sugar from storage in the liver and bring it into the blood, drive the blood from the abdominal regions into the heart, lungs, central nervous system and limbs. The resulting effect is to excite the muscles to irritability and enable unusual effort to be made.

Either fear, rage or pain will supply the stimulus required to set the adrenal glands into action. When a muscle is fatigued without any accompanying degree of excitement it may take a couple of hours for it to recover its normal condition, but if adrenaline is injected, or if through excitement the adrenal glands are stimulated to discharge and secrete, the fatigued muscle may regain its "irritability" in three minutes. The sugar set free from the liver and circulated in the blood stimulates the muscles, for sugar is the source of muscular energy. Fear, rage and pain are thus given us by nature as agencies to enable us to use our physical powers to their fullest extent in the crisis that produces the excitement.—Los Angeles Times.

"Second, the fighting near Soisson where our offensive began brilliantly has been checked by the flooding of the Aisne, with the consequent destruction of three footbridges, preventing reinforcements from being sent to the right bank to oppose a very strong attack by the enemy; hence, there has been a withdrawal of our forces of less than 1,800 metres (a little over a mile) on a front of less than five kilometres (more than three miles).

"Third, the new advance gained by us in the region of Perthes, and the failure of all the counter-attacks of the enemy.

"Fourth, the failure of the German attacks in the Argonne.

"Fifth, the continuation and maintenance of our success in upper Alsace."

Invasion of Palestine Likely.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A despatch to The Daily News from Cairo says or the authority of a missionary who has arrived there that the Turkish military preparations point to apprehension of a British invasion of Palestine. The hills around Nazareth, the correspondent says the missionary told him, have been fortified and the roads suitable for the transport of heavy guns are being constructed from Acre, Syria, to Mount Carmel.

There is a general belief among the natives still, according to the missionary, that Emperor William has been converted to Islam, and will undertake a pilgrimage to Mecca.

Ask Five Per Cent. Increase.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—An increase of 5 per cent. in eastern freight rates to United States points is asked for by the Canadian Railways in an application to the Dominion Railway Commission. They argue that this is necessitated by the increase granted in the United States. Canadian shippers, if they intend protesting must do so by Feb. 1, as the new rates are to come into force Feb. 15 according to the application.

Planned To Conquer America.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A remarkable book, which has been published anonymously, by a governess who was in the employ of the German prince until last year, attributes to a German officer the statement, made at the beginning of last year, that it was "no secret that plans for an American conquest were already mapped out by the German General Staff."

OUTLAY TO BE HEAVY

War Alone in 1915. Will Cost Canada $100,000,000.

Estimates at Ottawa for Approaching Session of Parliament Are Now Well In Hand and Point to a Record Expenditure—Hundred Million Takes No Account of Pensions.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—The estimates of the various departments are now well in hand and they will be ready for the session, which begins in a little over a fortnight. Everything that is not strictly necessary is being eliminated from the estimates. The big public works now under way in different parts of the country will be continued, but no new works of importance will be started. Many important public buildings that have been intended will be left over for the present on account of the heavy demands of the war and the difficulty of obtaining money for any other purposes.

It is understood that the militia estimates will include a war expenditure of $100,000,000 for the period from April 1 to the end of the present calendar year. This does not include pensions, which will also have to be provided for. It represents the cost of mobilizing, equipping, and transporting the second and third contingents and reinforcements and the maintenance of the Canadian force overseas.

Since the opening of the war the staff of the Militia Department has been increased by 500 employees. Several hundred have been taken on at headquarters, where there are now 180 in the accountant's branch alone, and others have been engaged at the headquarters of the various divisional areas and military districts.

No new armories or drill halls will be built while the war is in progress.

TO REINFORCE PATRICIAS.

Members of Nova Scotia Regiment Sent to the Front.

SALISBURY, Jan. 19.—Some wounded men of the Princess Patricia's Regiment have been brought to England and placed in hospitals.

Eighty-two members of the Nova Scotia Regiment (the 17th Infantry Battalion of the Canadian Expeditionary Force) have been sent to France to reinforce the Princess Patricia's. Lee-Enfield rifles have been issued to the 17th Battalion.

Col. W. R. W. James of the Royal Artillery has assumed command of the Fourth Brigade of the Canadians. Sergt. Roy Johnson, of Grimsby, Ont., has been promoted to be paymaster of the First Battalion.

British ordnance officers say that the Canadian Government is sending unnecessary overshoes, harness and Oliver equipment.

When the Princess Patricia's Regiment went to Winchester to join a British brigade before proceeding to France it was armed with the Lee-Enfield rifle in place of the Canadian Ross rifle. The statement that the Nova Scotian battalion has been so armed, therefore, is apparently significant of an early move toward the firing line.

The Fourth Brigade of the Canadians mentioned in the cable includes the Nova Scotia Regiment, and the 9th, 10th, 11th, and 12th Battalions.

EVACUATING LOWICZ?

Signs of Activity There Indicate Failure of German Plans.

Russian Aviators' Reports Show That the Wave That Has Threatened Warsaw Is Broken and a General Retirement of the Germans to Their Own Boundaries Is Now Probable.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—There are indications in despatches from the eastern front of fresh movements of the enemy in southern Poland. The arrival of a German army at Kielce is reported, and is taken here to represent a vigorous offensive in co-operation with the Austrian forces engaged on the banks of the Nida and Dunajec.

Grenville Fortesque, correspondent of The London Telegraph, says: The aviators report much movement in Lowicz, which is interpreted as an evacuation of the town. If this is so the wave that has threatened Warsaw has been broken.

A nice question confronts the Germans now—whether to attempt to maintain themselves in Poland or to retire to their own frontier. If Gen. von Hindenburg's army strives to hold during the rest of the winter the position it occupies at present it will lose, at a minimum, 25 per cent. of its forces before spring. Part of this loss will be due to the Russian guns, but a large portion will come through sickness—and these sacrifices will bring no results.

Every sign points to the fact that the wonderful German fighting machine is beginning to crack. During the last few weeks it has shown unmistakable signs of weakening at all points of contact. It is still capable of heavy fighting, but I am of the opinion that it has passed the period of its highest power.

Under these casualties the great German Staff might decide upon withdrawal to their own boundaries. Such a movement would be a moral defeat, but in view of their limited lines of communication the present battle area would be a safer experiment than the attempted occupation of seven of the ten governments of Poland.

The operations in East Prussia have a bearing on the situation here. A lieutenant-colonel from that district declares that the Russian army of the north is making slow but sure gains in this almost impossible country. Two of the outer forts of Lotzen have fallen, but the enemy still holds most of the railways. This leaves the north of Poland open to invasion, but should the Germans try to force their way to the south they will find a surprising number of Russian corps awaiting them.

Plock Virtually Occupied.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Daily Telegraph's Petrograd correspondent in a despatch dated Sunday says the Russians have not actually occupied Plock, in Russian Poland, but no Germans have been there for a fortnight. A few German troops, according to the correspondent, arrived in Plock two weeks ago, but hearing that Russians were in the vicinity they speedily departed.

TURKS IN FULL RETREAT.

Enver Bey's Campaign Has Come to an Inglorious End.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Daily News in a despatch from Frederick Rennett, its correspondent at Petrograd, says:

The Russians are now inside Turkish territory and within four marches of Erzerum. The garrison of Erzerum amounts to 30,000, with ample artillery, but is cut off from ammunition supplies from the coast and still more isolated by the winter conditions of the land route across Anatolia.

The Turkish winter campaign in the Caucasus has now suffered its final collapse. Its chances became very slender when the Goeben and Breslau failed to control communication in the Black Sea between Constantinople and Trebizond. The Turkish army assembled around Erzerum found itself cut off from reinforcements and supplies. With the heavy task of converting Enver Pasha's defeated and retreating corps at Kara Urgan into a force strong enough to continue the war with Russia, the Turkish rank and file fought stubbornly for ten days on frontier positions

The period from Jan. 5 to 15 has been like the preceding period, marked by wretched weather conditions—rain, snow, wind and fog, and mud. As a consequence the operations have lacked. The events worthy of note are:

"First, the extension and strengthening of our successful operations on the right bank of the Yser between t. Georges and the sea. The German offensive in this region has broken itself on the Yser; we have on the other hand, gained a broad open space beyond the river.

"Second, the fighting near Soissons, where our offensive began brilliantly, as been checked by the flooding of the Aisne, with the consequent destruction of three footbridges, preventing reinforcements from being sent to the right bank to oppose a very strong attack by the enemy; hence, there has been a withdrawal of our forces of less than 1,800 metres (a little over a mile) on a front of less than five kilometres (more than three miles).

"Third, the new advance gained by us in the region of Perthes, and the failure of all the counter-attacks of the enemy.

"Fourth, the failure of the German attacks in the Argonne.

"Fifth, the continuation and maintenance of our success in upper Alsace."

Invasion of Palestine Likely.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A despatch to the Daily News from Cairo says on the authority of a missionary who has arrived there that the Turkish military preparations point to apprehension of a British invasion of Palestine. The hills around Nazareth, the correspondent says the missionary told him, have been fortified and that roads suitable for the transport of heavy guns are being constructed from Acre, Syria, to Mount Carmel.

There is a general belief among the natives still, according to the missionary, that Emperor William has been converted to Islam, and will undertake a pilgrimage to Mecca.

Ask Five Per Cent. Increase.

OTTAWA, Jan. 19.—An increase of 5 per cent. in eastern freight rates. United States points is asked for by the Canadian Railways in an application to the Dominion Railway Commission. They argue that this is necessitated by the increase granted in the United States. Canadian shippers, if they intend protesting, must do so by Feb. 1, as the new rates are to come into force Feb. 15, according to the application.

Planned To Conquer America.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—A remarkable book, which has been published anonymously, by a governess who was in the employ of the German prince until last year, attributes to a German officer the statement, made at the beginning of last year, that it was no secret that plans for an American conquest were already mapped out by the German General Staff.

Many a winner at evening was almost beaten at noon.—Detroit Free Press.

France was armed with the Lee-Enfield rifle in place of the Canadian Ross rifle. The statement that the Nova Scotian battalion has been so armed, therefore, is apparently significant of an early move toward the firing line.

The Fourth Brigade of the Canadians mentioned in the cable includes the Nova Scotia Regiment, and the 9th, 10th, 11th, and 12th Battalions.

SURPRISES IMPOSSIBLE.

Aeroplanes Have Revolutionized Warfare, Says Observer.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The British military observer at the front discusses the part aviation is playing in the military operations. In this connection the observer says:

"Aviation has profoundly modified warfare by eliminating the element of surprise, for so long as the weather permits aerial reconnaissance it is impossible to carry out any great concentration or movement of troops by day within a considerable radius without being discovered. Especially in the present form of warfare have the former functions of the cavalry, as regards reconnaissance, been usurped by the flying corps."

The officer then pays a tribute to the remarkable work of the British aviators and mentions as a frequent occurrence reconnaissance in "driving snow with the temperature below zero or in a gale, under fire of the enemy's anti-air craft guns, or traveling with the wind, when the machine rocks and sways and attains a speed of 100 miles an hour."

Adrianople Is Evacuated.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The Turkish garrison at Adrianople, the partial withdrawal of which was previously reported, has now completely withdrawn, according to an Athens' despatch, which gives no explanation.

The London papers print a forecast appearing in The Paris Figaro, that Italy, Greece, Roumania and Bulgaria, will join the allies, but there is nothing more definite relative to this turn of affairs than there was a fortnight ago.

No Attack on La Bassee.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—The observer with the British army in France who writes the day-by-day reports of events given out to the press, is authority for the statement that British forces did not recently capture certain German positions near La Bassee and make an advance of one mile. That they had done so was reported Jan. 15 in a despatch from St. Omer, published in Paris.

Not Falkenhayn's Son.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Referring to the exploits of the French aerial corps, the official eye-witness says:

"It was Lieut. von Falkenstein, not Von Falkenhayn, as erroneously reported, who was killed by the French army aviator Gilbert. This was the third time that Gilbert, who is a military medalist, succeeded in bringing down a hostile craft."

TRIAL BEGINS AT LAST.

Directors of Union Life Company Before Court in Toronto.

TORONTO, Jan. 19.—After many ineffectual attempts to bring the case to a hearing, and efforts on the part of the defendants to traverse it to the County Court having failed, the trial of Harry K. Symons, K.C., and Dr. F. G. Hughes, two of the directors of the now defunct Union Life Assurance Co., started in the Criminal Assize Court yesterday before Mr. Justice Clute. A formidable array of legal men gathered to contest what was characterized by the crown as one of the most skillful and most scandalous cases of fraud ever perpetrated on a gullible public in Canada.

Symons and Hughes are only two of the four directors indicted on various counts of fraud and conspiracy. Dr. G. E. Millicamp died a fortnight ago, while H. Pollman Evans, the guiding spirit of the bold and complex scheme, has so far evaded the toils of justice.

The crown's case consisted of a long list of persons who had bought stocks and debentures in the National Agency Co. Mrs. J. Atkins of Paris Junction said she bought $3,500 worth of bonds on the recommendation of Pollman Evans. As far as she could recollect representations were made to her to the effect that the Government were behind the scheme.

A number of aged men and women from different parts of rural Ontario then proceeded into the witness-box and told stories of their losses. Mrs. Copeland of Aylmer had invested $4,500 in the National Agency. Dr. Hughes had told her, she said, that the company was as good as any bank in the Dominion.

Mr. Robert McGregor of Galt had invested to the extent of $10,000 in debentures. He had known Dr. Hughes for a number of years. He had every confidence in him, and was "fool enough to invest." The case was adjourned until to-day.

Move For Trade Relations.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—The Government has decided to appoint a committee to study a means of establishing closer relations between the French and Russian markets, with the object of eliminating from both German products. The committee will work in conjunction with the commercial attaches and leading business organizations of the two countries.

Prohibition in Quebec.

MONTREAL, Jan. 19.—Provincial prohibition until the war is over is a request the Montreal Protestant Ministerial Association will make to the Quebec Government, as decided upon at a meeting of the association yesterday.

Copper and Electricity.

The electrical conductivity of copper depends upon the total amount of impurities and not upon any one element. This is why the conductivity test is so valuable in determining the purity of copper.

The Turkish winter campaign in the Caucasus has now suffered its final collapse. Its chances became very slender when the Goeben and Breslau failed to control communication in the Black Sea between Constantinople and Trebizond. The Turkish army assembled around Erzerum found itself cut off from reinforcements and supplies. With the heavy task of converting Enver Pasha's defeated and retreating corps at Kara Urgan into a force strong enough to continue the war with Russia, the Turkish rank and file fought stubbornly for ten days on frontier positions around Kara Urgan until on Saturday they fell victims to the careless and incompetent management of their German and Turkish leaders. Originally five corps were sent forward by Enver Pasha and Gen. von Sanders into Russian territory, but after the disasters at Ardagan and Sara Kamysh only the remnants of two corps could return, the 11th Turkish Corps, which was the reserve of the invading army. It is this combination which is now retreating hastily on the road to Erzerum with its rear guard annihilated and Enver himself hurrying to Constantinople. The German General Lange has been left to try and extricate the Turks from complete destruction. They have thrown great numbers of their field guns into the deep, snow-covered ravines.

Many Private Bills.

TORONTO, Jan. 19.—Twenty-nine applications for private bills have been forwarded to the clerks of the Provincial Legislature to date. These come in the majority as requests from different municipalities seeking ratification of undertakings that have received sanction from the ratepayers, or from companies desiring increased powers.

LEGEND OF THE TEAPOT.

Origin of the Beverage as the Tale Is Told In China.

The Chinese claim to be the first users of tea as a drink, and how it originated is told in a pretty little legend that dates from 2,000 years before the coming of Christ.

A daughter of a then reigning sovereign fell in love with a young nobleman whose humble birth excluded him from marrying her. They managed to exchange glances, and he occasionally gathered a few blossoms and had them conveyed to her.

One day in the palace garden the sweethearts met, and the young man endeavored to give her a few flowers, but so keen was the watchfulness of her attendants that all she could grasp was a little twig with green leaves.

On reaching her room she put the twig in water, and toward evening she drank the water in which the twig had been kept. So agreeable was the taste that she even ate the leaves and stalks. Every day afterward she had bunches of the tea tree brought to her, which she treated in the same way.

Imitation being the sincerest form of flattery, the ladies of the court tried the experiment and with such pleasing results that the custom spread throughout the kingdom—and the great Chinese tea industry became one of the greatest businesses in the world.—London Tit-Bits.

Be Clean! Inside and Outside

If you would be healthy, strong and happy. Baths keep the skin clean and in good condition. But what about the inside of the body? You can no more afford to neglect it than the outside. It is just as important that the system be cleansed of the poisonous impurities caused by weakness of the digestive organs or by inactivity of the liver.

DR. PIERCE'S Golden Medical Discovery (In Tablet or Liquid Form)

Cleanses the system—and more. It puts the liver in such a condition of health that it purifies the blood—as it should. It helps the stomach digest food so that it makes good blood—rich, red blood to nourish and strengthen all the organs.

You may avail yourself of its tonic, revivifying influence by getting a bottle or a box of tablets from your medicine dealer—or send 50c for a trial box. Address as below.

POULTRY SHOW THE BEST YET

The tenth annual show held last week by the Napanee Poultry Association was the most successful in its history, over one thousand birds being shown. Not alone in the number of exhibits did it surpass former years but also the quality of the birds reached a very much higher standard than has hitherto been attained. Many winners from Guelph, Hamilton, and other shows, where the number of entries run up over 2500, were placed on exhibition and had a hard run for their money against local competition. A S. C. Brown Leghorn Cockerel, who carried away the prize as the best bird in the Show at Hamilton was beaten by a local entry, though the order of prizes might have been reversed had it not had the disadvantage of a long railroad journey, but this bears testimony of the excellence of the stock produced by local breeders. Many birds are being shown this week at the Ottawa Winter Fair, and it has been suggested that the Napanee Show be held over Saturday so that birds intended for Ottawa may be forwarded there by the local association as the two shows always follow one another. This feature should attract a number of birds from Toronto and west that could stop off here on their way through to Ottawa and materially help our Show and besides that holding the birds over the week end would give the farmers a chance to see them when in town on Saturday. The recent adjustment of express rates would enable the birds to be shown here without any extra cost of shipment.

The heaviest classes this year were the Rhode Island Reds and White Wyandottes. The former brought out very strong competition among the local enthusiasts, with a good following of Kingston birds. In the cockerel division there were twenty-five entries including imported birds and hardly a poor one among them. In nearly every instance the locally raised birds principally from the flocks of G. B. Curran and H. W. Pringle, won over imported and outside entries. Judge Bennett, in his remarks upon the Reds, said that they were the finest collection he had seen this year at any of the local shows. The great attraction was the cockerel and four pullets, imported by the President of the Show. These, in his estimation, were magnificent.

Silver) for the best White Wyandotte Cock, Hen, Cockerel and Pullet. This is the second win and now it becomes a permanent possession. Mr. Geo. Somers won the Association Cup with his exhibition pen of White Wyandottes and McMahon & Thurlby, the Marsh Cup, for the largest and best collection of White Wyandottes.

There was a splendid showing of Orpingtons. In the Buff most of the prizes went to P. C. Maxwell, Odessa, who had the largest exhibit of this variety. In white birds Maxwell shared with birds from Grafton. The Black exhibit was not so big, though it contained some splendid specimens.

The Asiatics made a larger showing this year than last, all the birds in this class coming from outside points. The Buff Cochins numbered the most, with some good ones from Bowmanville, Spencerville and Brockville. Partridge Cochins were also of good order, but the classes were smaller. The exhibit of Mediterranean fowl was not so good as has been other years. There were prize winners from big shows in these classes but with the exception of Single Comb Brown Leghorns the competition was not strong, the breeders having things mostly their own way in their particular classes. The Plymouth Rocks were not up to the average standard. This variety of poultry do not meet with the favor that they deserve among the local fanciers and it seems that over the whole Province their popularity is on the decline. W. J. Colwill showed a very few excellent birds, but the classes were too small to do them justice.

There was a big collection of water fowl, more from outside points than is usual. This is a hard class to encourage, as owing to the high express rates on these heavy fowl, exhibitors from a distance are chary about sending their birds.

A very attractive feature of the show was the demonstration in killing and plucking fowl by the representative from Gunns, Limited, Toronto. At the present time when crate fattened poultry has such a good market it is important that every farmer should know how to kill and dry pick a chicken that will keep in cold storage. During the two days that the demonstration was held here a large crowd of farmers and their wives came in and appreciated the demonstrations. Mr. Evans beat his record of last year of one chicken in $\frac{1}{2}$ of a minute by killing and plucking two in a minute and a half. A prize of \$5.00 was offered for the farmer or farmers wife who could pluck one chicken while the expert was doing two, but the money is still safe with the donor.

It was the White Wyandottes that offered the greatest difficulty in placing. They were all winners, especially in the Cock Class. The second, third, fourth and fifth birds might easily have been changed and the judgement remained sound. The honors were divided between W. A. Steacy, Geo. From a financial standpoint the show was a distinct success. The profits of the show will be given for Red Cross purposes and through the kind assistance of Mrs. F. F. Miller and a number of ladies the show was thoroughly advertised and receipts were far in excess of other years. The Association feels very indebted to Mrs. Miller and her helpers, and as a result of their efforts a good contribution is expected to be available for the Red Cross Society of Canada.

END OF THE EARTH.

The Latest Figuring Puts It Only Two Million Years Away.

Scientists tell us that life on the earth began about 2,000,000 years ago. It has generally been accepted that life will last for 95,000,000 years.

Ninety-five million years is a fairly long time. None of us who are alive today need worry about what will take place 95,000,000 years hence. Even the most altruistic can scarcely be inspired by love for an inconceivably remote posterity.

But the French savants are altogether disturbing. Here comes one, M. Verronet, who says that the earth will permanently freeze within the next 2,000,000 years and that life will vanish. This is bringing the tragedy nearer home. We would gladly accept the older reckoning.

Verronet places mankind of today about midway between the beginning and the end. He computes that in the future life will exist as long as it has already existed. He specifies only one forty-eighth as long a life as those who have studied in the past.

There is only one consolation to be derived from the Verronet reckoning. As far as the influence of today is concerned 2,000,000 years is as good as 95,000,000. In either event those who are comfortably laboring today cannot expect to be lovingly remembered when the cataclysm of ice makes the earth a barren wilderness.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Announcement of a decrease of nearly 4,000,000 bushels in the United States visible supply of wheat tended to act as more than an offset today for the bearish effect of federal enquiries and of talk regarding a possible embargo on exports. Prices closed unsettled, but $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ to $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ above Saturday night.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 18.—The wheat market today was very unsettled and nervous, and prices during the early hours were wild, fluctuations in a few minutes ranging as much as $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ to 2¢. Later they steadied to some extent at fractionally higher figures than Saturday's close. The export business was off again today.

The cash situation has undergone a decided change today. Offerings are much more plentiful for delivery at navigation opening, but there were practically no buyers. There was little doing in spot wheat. Flax made a considerable break, the range for the day being 9 1/2¢, a recovery from the low points taking place near the close. Wheat prices stiffened on the close, caused by the decrease of 3,864,000 shown in the United States visible for the week.

Wheat futures closed $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ higher; cash $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ to $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ higher on contract; graded oats, $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ higher to $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ lower, and flax, $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ to $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ lower.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, Jan. 18.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable today was very quiet owing to the fact that there was very little demand from overseas buyers for supplies after the sharp break in prices of Saturday. There was some enquiry for oats and bids of 29¢ 6d were made from Dublin for extra No. 1 feed, which exporters would not accept. The local trade in coarse grains was quiet, but the undertone of the market is firm. Flour was strong, 25¢ to 50¢ per barrel higher. Millfeed in good demand. Butter is quiet and firm. Cheese was unchanged, and eggs active.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Jan. 10.—Pastor Russell spoke to-day on the disturbed social condition of the world. His text was, "The heavens and the earth shall shake; but the Lord will be the hope of His people."—Joel 3:16. It was pointed out that the shaking heavens are not the Divine abode, but a symbolic representation of present day ecclesiasticism. For some time the stars, or bright ones, have been falling. There is a great shaking or confusion now operating in ecclesiastical circles. It will progress until, as St. Peter figuratively declares, "the heavens shall take fire"—be consumed, cease to be, leaving the way clear for the "new heavens," the ecclesiastical system of the Millennium, which will be the glorified Church, invisible to men, but clothed with Divine Power for the blessing of mankind, for their release from ignorance and superstition and their uplift for a thousand years, for their return to the image and likeness of God, lost in Eden, redeemed at Calvary.

The shaking of earth referred to by our Lord and the Apostles signifies revolutions that are expected to follow immediately the present European war. If the Pastor understands the Bible teaching correctly on this matter, this great symbolic earthquake, which will eventuate in anarchy, will reach its culmination first in Italy. However, this will not be merely a sectional shaking. The whole earth, the entire social fabric, will be shaken; and everything in it that is not of a permanent character—not in harmony with Divine Justice, Mercy and Truth—will be shaken loose. In the symbolic language of St. Peter, the earth, society, also shall take fire and pass away with a great commotion, in the fire of anarchy.

"Blood, Fire and Pillars of Smoke." Joel's prophecy, referring to this time, points specifically to the "blood, fire and pillars of smoke" which we see already beginning in Europe. More than a million men of the flower of Europe, in the bloom of life, have shed their blood. The explosion of tons of powder and the burning of cities and villages is surely a fire in the earth, the like of which never occurred before in the same space of time. Everywhere pillars of smoke are rising—from the battlefield, from burning villages, and from funeral pyres whereon the dead, too numerous to bury, are burned. How much more blood, smoke and pillars of fire there will be we can only surmise.

The Pastor had courage to speak of these terrible things only because of his full confidence that behind this dark cloud is the glad sunrise of

TWO WOMEN SAVED FROM OPERATIONS

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Edmonton, Alberta, Can. — "I think it is no more than right for me to thank you for what your kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have done for me.

"When I wrote to you some time ago I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had organic inflammation and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend your medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills, and think they are fine. I will never be without the medicine in the house."—Mrs. FRANK EMSLEY, 903 Columbia Avenue, Edmonton, Alberta.

The Other Case.

Beatrice, Neb. — "Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. CHILD, Beatrice, Neb.

BEARDS IN BATTLE.

And Why Clean Shaven Men Became Prized as Warriors.

The habit of shaving is not of a very ancient origin. According to James Stephens in "Here Are Ladies," when humanity lived a quiet, rural and unambitious life men did not shave; their hair was their glory, and it they had occasion to swear, which must have been infrequent, their hardest and readiest oath was "By the beard of my father," showing clearly that this feature was held in veneration in early times and was probably accorded divine honors upon suitable occasions.

With the advent of war came the habit of shaving. A beard offered too handy a grip to a foe who had got to close quarters; therefore, warriors who had no true hardihood of soul preferred cutting off their beards to the honorable labor of defending their chins.

Many ancient races effected a compromise in order to retain a fitting military appearance, for a bareheaded warrior has but little of terror in his aspect. The ancient Egyptians, for example, who had cut off or could not cultivate or had been forcibly deprived of their beards, were wont to go into battle clad in heavy false whiskers, which they changed as often as they

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Jan. 18.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 2567 cattle, 1128 hogs, 1362 sheep and lambs and 68 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice heavy steers sold at $7.75 to $8; choice butchers' at $7.25 to $7.50; good at $7 to $7.25; medium at $6.60 to $6.90; choice cows at $6.25 to $6.50; good cows at $5.75 to $6; medium at $5.25 to $5.50; canners at $3.75 to $4; bulls at $5.25 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders.

Feeders were quoted at $6 to $6.40, and stockers at $5 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a fair supply of milkers and springers, which sold at steady prices, ranging from $50 to $55.

Veal Calves.

The calf market was steady. Choice veals sold at $10 to $10.50; good at $8 to $9.50; medium at $7 to $8; common at $5 to $6.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Choice light lambs weighing about 80 to 85 lbs. sold steadily at $9.75 to $9.25; heavy lambs at $7.25 to $7.75; light ewes at $5.75 to $6; heavy ewes at $4 to $4.50; culls at $2.50 to $3.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $7.50; $7.75 weighed off cars, and $7.15 f.o.b. cars at country points.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Jan. 18.—At the Montreal Stock Yards owing to the weakness in the Toronto market and the decline in prices of 50c per cwt. locally a weaker feeling developed in the market and prices ruled 25c per cwt. lower. Trade was slow, butchers and packers having carried over a fair supply from last week. A few small lots of picked choice steers sold at $8, and full loads at $7.75, but the bulk of the trading that was done was in cattle ranging in prices from $6.25 to $7.25 per cwt. There were some American buyers on the market who picked a few loads of fair butchers' cattle for shipment to Albany.

There was no change in sheep and lambs, prices being steady with a fair demand, and supplies ample to fill all requirements, and sales of Ontario lambs were made at $7.75 to $8, and Quebec at $7.25 to $7.50 per cwt. Live hogs were in poor demand, and prices declined 10c to 25c per cwt. Demand from packers was fair, and sales of selected lots were made at $8.30, sows at $6.30, and stags at $4.15 per cwt. weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.75 to $8; do., medium, $6.25 to $7.25; do., common, $5 to $6; canners, $4 to $4.75; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; do., medium, $5.50 to $6.25; do., bulls, $5 to $7; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; do., common and medium, each, $65 to $70; springers, $55 to $60; sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5; bucks and culls, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $7.25 to $8; hogs, off cars, $8.30; calves, $5 to $15.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Jan. 18.—Cattle—Receipts 15,000. Market firm. Beefsteaks, $5.65 to $9.40; cows and heifers, $3.25 to $8.10; calves, $8 to $10.50.

Hogs—Receipts 30,000. Market unsettled. Light, $6.75 to $7.10; mixed, $6.70 to $7.10; heavy, $6.50 to $7.50; rough, $6.50 to $6.65; pigs, $5.40 to $7; bulk of sales, $6.80 to $7.10.

Sheep—Receipts 8000. Market firm. Natives, $5.60 to $6.25; yearlings, $6.50 to $7.30; lambs, native, $6.75 to $8.30.

Substitute for Charcoal.

of life, have shed their blood. The explosion of tons of powder and the burning of cities and villages is surely a fire in the earth, the like of which never occurred before in the same space of time. Everywhere pillars of smoke are rising—from the battlefield, from burning villages, and from funeral pyres whereon the dead, too numerous to bury, are burned. How much more blood, smoke and pillars of fire there will be we can only surmise.

The Pastor had courage to speak of these terrible things only because of his full confidence that behind this dark cloud is the glad sunrise of the New Day—the Day of Messiah. With such a glorious hope beyond it—the hope of the Church's glorification in the First Resurrection and of the world's Millennial blessing—God's true people everywhere can lift up their heads and rejoice through their tears, even as their Great Teacher, eighteen centuries ago, prophesied that they would do.

Perishing For Lack of Knowledge.

Many of God's true people have been in ignorance of His real Character and Plan because stupefied by the false doctrines of the Dark Ages. They have not studied their Bibles aright. On the contrary, many of them have been "overcharged with the cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches," and have been unfruitful in respect to their character development and their knowledge of God.

The deceitfulness of riches does not signify that merely the rich are thus deceived. The great mass of humanity are under the lure of riches, spending earthly attainments, time, strength of mind and body, searching for earthly wealth, but getting little. In the distressing time impending, some of these will see their mistake and wish that they had been more alert in laying up Heavenly riches—knowledge of the Bible, of God, and character-development in His likeness. To such the old familiar hymn will have new meaning—

"When all around my soul gives way,
He then is all my Hope and Stay."

Our Adventist friends are not the only ones who have made the mistake of thinking that the fire and the shaking of earth and heaven are merely literal. Practically all the creeds of Orthodoxy give this misinterpretation. It is now time that our eyes of understanding should open. Now that the shaking and the fire have begun, it is high time that we should see "the earth abideth forever." There is no reason why it should be destroyed, nor why humanity should be destroyed off the earth. God's purposes have not yet been accomplished. Yea, the Divine Plan is only in its infancy. Humanity has learned only its first lesson—"the exceeding sinfulness of sin." The second lesson, the matchless brilliancy of virtue, will be given during the Messianic Reign.

A War Dictionary.

Soldiers in the British Expeditionary Force each carry a half-sheet typewritten French dictionary of the most necessary words.

Regularity

of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. Salts and other harsh mineral purgatives irritate the delicate lining of the bowels. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills—entirely vegetable—regulate the bowels effectively without weakening, sickening or griping. Use handy a grip to a foeman who had got to close quarters; therefore, warriors who had no true hardihood of soul preferred cutting off their beards to the honorable labor of defending their chins.

Many ancient races effected a compromise in order to retain a fitting military appearance, for a bareheaded warrior has but little of terror in his aspect. The ancient Egyptians, for example, who had cut off or could not cultivate or had been forcibly deprived of their beards, were wont to go into battle clad in heavy false whiskers, which, when an enemy seized hold of them, came off instantly in his hand, and the ancient Egyptian was enabled to dispatch him while in a trance of stupefaction and horror.

Clean shaven men became by this cowardly stratagem very much prized as fighting men, and thus the foundation of the shaving habit was laid.

Names of Nations.

The names of the great nations of Europe set many puzzles to the philologist. There is no doubt that France is the country of the Franks, the free men, or that Austria is the eastern empire. But one would not so easily guess that "Russians" means rowers or seafarers—a word of Swedish origin commemorating the Scandinavian vikings. The Britons have been supposed to take their name from a word signifying variegated, in allusion to their staining their skins with woad. Most puzzling of all is "Germans," which is not the Latin "germanus," own brother, but of Celtic origin, and has been variously interpreted as meaning "the people" or "the shouters."—London Chronicle.

Taken at Her Word.

A Bloomfield woman looked across her lawn to where passersby were breaking off the blossoming twigs of her favorite quince tree.

"We might as well cut the tree down as let it stand for people to destroy," said she.

Half an hour later the tree lay on the ground beside a little hatchet, while around behind the house the small boy of the family was getting a switch with one of the branches.

This teaches us that we should be sure of our audience before we employ hyperbole in our speech. — Newark News.

A Means of Approach.

Though I am not a smoker I like to carry matches in my pocket. One is always liable to be accosted on the street by some one in need of a light. To be able to give a match is a great luxury. It forms the basis for a momentary friendship.—Atlantic.

A Tug of War.

The well-dressed, portly man stood for several moments watching the brawny drayman who was laboriously tugging at a large, heavy laden box, which seemed almost as wide as the doorway through which he was trying to move it. Presently the kindly disposed onlooker approached the perspiring drayman and said with a patronizing air: "Like to have a lift?"

"Bet yer life," the other replied, and for the next two minutes the two men on opposite sides of the box worked, lifted, puffed and wheezed, but the box stuck fast. They went at it again, but it did not move an inch. Finally the portly man straightened up and said between puffs, "I don't believe we can get it in there."

"Get it in!" the drayman almost shouted. "Why, you blamed mutton-head, I'm trying to get it out!"

LETTERS OF THANKS.

Very appreciative letters of thanks have recently been received from Mr. Prud'homme for cases of clothing sent by this Committee for distressed Belgians and two from our soldier boys at Salisbury Plain, for knitted "comforts" received.

A CALL FROM NORTHERN FRANCE.

Very urgent appeals are being sent forth from the north of France for supplies, bandages, drugs and anaesthetics in particular. We shall therefore be glad if our workers and all friends wishing to assist us in our task, will send in to our Committee-room, Harshaw Block, all old linen, viz: old table-cloths, pillow cases and old steam-loom, sheets etc., they can spare, for all of which there is great need. Bandages can be cut in our work-room, and given out for sterilization, or those preferring to do all this work at home can come to the room and receive instructions.

We understand the French soldiers are not nearly as well equipped as our own "Tommys" in regard to woollen "comforts," so the knitting must go steadily forward.

There is need for more Balaclava caps and for as many pairs of socks as we can send.

Some two months ago a number of Toronto women sent a large package of wool to France, through a French gentleman, who had been visiting in that city, and was returning to his native country.

This parcel was most gratefully received and a very appreciative letter sent to Toronto from our allied sisters in France, who were only too pleased to knit the wool into useful articles for their soldiers.

Our work-meetings on Thursday afternoons continue as popular as ever, and will be continued every week. The Committee-room is open as well every Saturday afternoon from 2 to 5.30 o'clock.

Get after the lice on your cattle and poultry. Our new "Anti-Louse" powder is guaranteed to do the work. It is not poisonous, and has a pleasant odor in the stable. 25 cents per pound at the Medical Hall—Fred L. Hooper.

The Red Cross Society

A special appeal is being made to everyone interested in Red Cross work for donations to a bale to be sent at once to the hospitals in France, that are in such dire need of supplies. Old linen and cotton for dressings and bandages, boracic acid, vaseline, bichloride tablets, antiseptic gauze, absorbent cotton and anything in the way of hospital supplies will be gratefully received. Kindly send or bring to the Red Cross rooms by Saturday, Jan. 30th.

Quilts are being made for the Belgians and all who can help in any way by their work or by giving materials are invited to the work rooms Saturday, Jan. 23rd. Afternoon tea will be served.

The following letter has been received from the Supt. of Supplies in Toronto.

77 King St., East,
Toronto, Jan. 13, 1915.

Dear Madam—I have just received a letter from Colonel Hodgetts, the Commissioner in London, England, for the Canadian Red Cross Society. He says in part:

"As to Red Cross supplies I would simply say that of those sent with the contingent which have been used you will have received Col. McLaren's report (Col. McLaren has written this office most cordially thanking us for the supplies we sent with the contingent). If it had not been for these stores the Bulford hospital would have been in sore distress.

"Canadian supplies are very similar to those I saw in the store house of the British Red Cross.

"In reply to your enquiry, re cholera belts, by all means send forward the woven belts of different sizes. They are far more satisfactory than the hand-knitted and the flannel are not acceptable to the men.

"I am now in close touch with both the British Red Cross and the St. John Ambulance Association and I attend the meetings of both committees.

"Will you kindly convey to the people of Canada my thanks for the generous support they are giving to the work I have to administer here. Like Kitchener, I want more money and more supplies and still more money and more supplies, (for no grander work could be done than through the Red Cross.)

"Do not forget the Duchess of Connaught Canadian Red Cross Hospital. If we get the support necessary it will be increased in size. I want it to be the best Red Cross Hospital in England. The site is ideal."

I would ask you to make all the information contained in this letter as widely and quickly known as possible amongst your branches.

Yours truly,

A. M. Plumtree,
Supt. of Supplies.

GERMAN ZEPPELINS RAID ENGLAND

London, Wednesday, Jan. 20.—German air-craft made their long-threatened raid on England last night and attempted to blow up with bombs the King's royal residence in Sandringham, County Norfolk.

This intention was ill-timed, for King George and Queen Mary with their family, who had been staying at Sandringham, had returned London yesterday morning to resume their residence in Buckingham Palace.

It is still not definitely known whether the raiders were Zeppelins, aeroplanes, but Zeppelins were reported yesterday afternoon as passing over the North Sea in a westerly direction and most of those reporting that event incline to the belief that these were the raiders.

WHIRR OF PROPELLERS HEARD

The night was quite calm, but veiled and cloudy, which made it impossible for the people in the tower over which they passed to distinguish even the outlines of the raiders, tho the whirr of their propellers and the droning of their motors could distinctly be heard.

A Zeppelin is reported to have been brought down by the fire of a warship at Hunstanton, a few miles north of Sandringham.

Bombs were dropped in Yarmouth, King's Lynn, Sandringham, Cromer, Sheringham and Beeston, and everywhere, except at Beeston, casualties and damage to property resulted.

The first place visited was the well-known seaside resort and fishing town of Yarmouth, where the people were taken by surprise at the sudden visit.

TWO KILLED AT YARMOUTH.

Two persons, a man and a woman were killed and a number of other persons were injured and much damage to property was done by the raiders in their visit, which lasted less than ten minutes. Four or five bombs were dropped in Yarmouth.

When the attack began the authorities gave instructions that all high in the town be extinguished and other precautionary measures were taken to safeguard the population. Little signs of a panic were seen during the raid in Yarmouth.

Apparently the raiders, after visiting Yarmouth, proceeded to Cromer where they also dropped bombs and thence to Sheringham and Beeston. Then turning inland they made for Sandringham, dropping explosive missiles there and at King's Lynn where a boy was killed and a man a woman and a child were injured and two houses were destroyed.

It was variously reported that five or seven bombs were dropped in King's Lynn. The damage done at Sandringham has not been reported. It is known, however, that the royal palace escaped unharmed. At Sandringham a bomb penetrated a hot but did not explode.

It was only yesterday that Scotland Yard authorities issued instructions concerning the measures to be taken by the police and other officials in the event of an air raid.

ERMAN ZEPPELINS RAID ENGLAND

London, Wednesday, Jan. 20.—German air-craft made their long-threatened raid on England last night and attempted to blow up with bombs King's royal residence in Sandringham, County Norfolk.

This intention was ill-timed, for King George and Queen Mary with their family, who had been staying at Sandringham, had returned to London yesterday morning to resume their residence in Buckingham Palace.

A Zeppelin is reported to have been brought down by the fire of a warship at Hunstanton, a few miles north of Sandringham.

Bombs were dropped in Yarmouth, King's Lynn, Sandringham, Cromer, Eversingham and Beeston, and everywhere, except at Beeston, casualties and damage to property resulted.

The first place visited was the well-known seaside resort and fishing town of Yarmouth, where the people were taken by surprise at the sudden visit.

TWO KILLED AT YARMOUTH.

Two persons, a man and a woman, were killed and a number of other persons were injured and much damage to property was done by the raiders in their visit, which lasted less than ten minutes. Four or five persons were dropped in Yarmouth. When the attack began the authorities gave instructions that all lights in the town be extinguished and other precautionary measures were taken to safeguard the populace. The signs of a panic were seen during the raid in Yarmouth.

Apparently the raiders, after visiting Yarmouth, proceeded to Cromer, where they also dropped bombs and once to Sheringham and Beeston. On turning inland they made for Sandringham, dropping explosive missiles there and at King's Lynn, where a boy was killed and a man, a woman and a child were injured in two houses were destroyed. It was variously reported that five and ten bombs were dropped in King's Lynn. The damage done at Sandringham has not been reported. It is known, however, that the royal party escaped unharm. At Sandringham a bomb penetrated a house and did not explode.

It was only yesterday that the Island Yard authorities issued instructions concerning the measures to be taken by the police and other officials in the event of an air raid.

The police and special constables were called upon in the instructions to hold themselves in readiness for a possible raid on London and the fire brigades were also warned to be in readiness.

COMMOTION IN LONDON.

The report of the attack on Norfolk County caused a considerable commotion in London. The searchlights all about the city were busily engaged throughout the evening scouring the sky with their rays to pick up any aircraft that might approach. Up to a late hour, however, there was no sign of an aerial visitor.

Reports reaching London are to the effect that a squadron of six Zeppelins crossed over the North Sea, and on reaching the coast line separated, some of them taking a southerly direction and the others an opposite course. These reports, however, have not been confirmed.

EXPLODING BOMB AS WARNING.

It was at 10.45 o'clock when the loud whirr of a Zeppelin approaching King's Lynn was heard. A previous warning of its approach had been given by the explosion of a bomb which it had dropped between the royal village of Sandringham and Densingham, not far from The Wash.

Reaching King's Lynn, the aerial visitor circled until seen over the town and dropped four bombs which exploded with terrific detonations. People thrust their heads out of bedroom windows in surprise, asking what had happened. Great flashes of light accompanied the explosions. One of the bombs which fell near the docks, exploded, throwing splinters from its shell into the market place. Another started a fire. After hovering over the town for fifteen minutes the Zeppelin appeared to continue its journey along the borders of The Wash.

As the town is in complete darkness, it is difficult to ascertain tonight the extent of the damage done by the raider.

STORY OF THE RAID.

A resident of King's Lynn told the following story of the raid late tonight:

"I had heard this evening that a Zeppelin had visited Yarmouth and subsequently passed over Sheringham, traveling westward. In the expectation of sighting the formidable visitor, I kept a sharp outlook in the direction indicated. About 10.30 o'clock, I heard an explosion which I afterwards found had been caused by a bomb dropped in Dersingham village, eight miles from Lynn, and forming part of the King's West Norfolk estate.

"Subsequently, I learned that a Zeppelin had dropped bombs over the neighboring village of Snettisham, five miles northeast of King's Lynn, a watering resort of Queen Alexandra during her summer visits to Sandringham, and that another had fallen on Grimston, a village on the road to Lynn. At Grimston, the missile fell near the ammunition store belonging to the troop camp in that district, but no damage was done by it.

"Not long after hearing these explosions, I could distinguish the noise of an airship's propellers and a little later could see plainly a Zeppelin out-

Some Experiences of Canada's First Expeditionary Force at Home and Abroad.

BY
Pie. R. Johnston.

Dear Editor:

If a space in your good paper may be spared for my few lines I would like to let you know a few of our experiences as Soldiers and as the English call the Canadians, "Bricks." The English people think the Canadians are just the boys.

Here are just a few lines on Val Cartier and Salisbury Plains.

Well, when war broke out on Aug. 3rd, 1914, I thought the first thing to do if it was necessary would be to enlist, if Canada were to mobilize a force to send overseas in aid of the Empire. Well it was not long before I got the opportunity to join. I then enlisted for duty at home, or for services abroad, as I think every able-bodied man should do, more especially unmarried men who are at the present day loafing on the corners of the streets. Not only in our own town, but in every town and city in Canada.

It should be every man's duty to try and save our Empire and our Dominion. No matter if they may not be needed just at present. But later on they join when it is too late. At any rate by the talk of the wounded soldiers who return from the front for a few days rest, says we are safe. And I think if the Canadians all do their little part the country will be safe from the terrible "Huns."

But it must be remembered that Germany is an awful power to wrestle with.

When we started to mobilize in Napanee under the head of Lieut. B. R. Simpson, the townspeople thought at the time it was a little too swanky for the Canadian Signalling Corps to mobilize for we would not be needed. They did not know the situation of things at that time. But I am glad to say we got away with it alright and are now abroad with the rest of Canada's magnificent body of men, which the King said we were.

After mobilization at Napanee we were ordered to entrain for that great camp at Valcartier, situated just at the foot of the Laurentian Mts., and about sixteen miles from the city of Quebec, being just twenty-six hours run from Napanee via Grand Trunk and Canadian Northern. Well we landed in Valcartier on Aug. 19th. Napanee boys, including the 47th, which were picked up at Kingston, were about the first ones at the new camp. The railways at that time were built a little out from the camp and a few minutes walk from the Camp's Headquarters, which we were afterwards situated alongside of. I must say before a camp was thought of in those parts the land was all being farmed and also divided off with fences, there being grain uncultivated standing in the fields, with an odd garden of potatoes, etc., here and there. Our first duty was to pitch our tents. This had to be done in a field of oats about three feet high and terribly wet for it had just stopped raining. Well we fitted all the tents for ourselves up that afternoon then so many were placed in each tent. The next morning, fences being unnecessary, all men were set to work to tear them down, of which it soon was finished. Electric light, day at camp, also moving away the ships that awaited us at docks at Quebec. On September 30 being on board the transports were conveyed out of the docks Quebec up the river here to wait a couple of days for some other boat to arrive. We laid in the river three days, then finally we steamed down as far as Gaspe Bay, another twelve hours to wait. On the first of October orders were given to us for our destination in England, that time not known by anyone, I thought to be Southampton, which it turned out to be, but for the German submarines in the channel our course was changed to Plymouth. Our transports numbered thirty-two with eight cruisers in attendance. These transports travelled in the lines, the distance between each row was about one mile and the length about fourteen miles long. The cruisers travelled four in the middle two at the front and two at the rear. On the eighth day at sea a steamer was sighted, and orders were given to halt, as all were made to do. This one took no notice of orders, and steamed faster ahead. Chase was given by one of our ships and shells fired over her bows, which soon brought it to a standstill. Investigation it was found to be a neutral ship and was then allowed to follow her course.

Our work on board was mostly a drill, with life saving practice. Church was held on board as usual.

A few days before landing flour commenced to get short, but as we had wheat on board as part of the cargo, and it being handy, orders were given and a party of men set to work at grinding wheat through a coffee mill. It was kept going day and night, with very little headway.

The men stood the trip over pretty well with very little sea sickness. Ships travelled with lights out. I have never been known to occur before that such a number of ships should cross the ocean together. And may never occur again. It was certainly a fine sight to see thirty-eight ships, cruisers and all, in straight lines on the sea. I said before that our original destination was Southampton, but owing to some "Great German" cruisers which were watching for us in the channel just off that place, and which their searchlights on the coast found out were intruders, orders were received and our course was changed to Plymouth. But of all the cruisers that waited in the channel only three of them were able to escape the British torpedoes. It is not known how or where they found out that we were coming. It must have been through some of their spies.

Our arrival at Plymouth was very quiet. Of course no one knew we were coming there and they could not see us coming on account of landing in the harbour at midnight. On the following morning the bands on board the ships began to play "Tipperary." Then the people flocked to the dock to welcome the Canadian troops. We stayed in Plymouth for four days waiting our turn to disembark. After all troops and their equipments were unloaded a parade of the thirty-two thousand soldiers marched

CHAPTER XVI.

A Thief Is Rudely Foiled.

QUIETLY Lucille allowed herself to be conducted back to the room from which she had just made her escape. Her heart was so heavy over the death of the captain she did not care what happened.

She had tried her best, but still failure dogged her footsteps. Her sweetheart had resigned from the army under such a cloud as must have broken his spirit completely. His heart she knew was already broken by her seeming disbelief in him. Her father was entangled in the same net with his aid, and she held the key to the situation—a key with no lock to fit. She alone knew where the papers that would clear up the entire mystery were located, and she was a prisoner.

"Mr. Loubeque's compliments, Miss Lucille," murmured the butler as he noiselessly approached with a tiny glass of liquor, "and he thought a tiny sip might prove beneficial to the nerves."

"Thank you, Thompson," she murmured sweetly. "Tell your present employer I shall gladly do so. But," she added, her eyes flashing maliciously, "I forgot Mr. Loubeque has been your employer right along."

"Quite so, Miss Lucille. Thank you."

Before his perfect aplomb Lucille stood undecided. Her nerves were shattered, and the drink, she knew, would do her good. But there had been that look in the man's eyes. She could not be mistaken in it. She touched her tongue to the delicious, fiery stuff and waited. A sensation of comfort slowly approached her weary spirit—a feeling of lassitude. She fought the sensation away.

Pouring out the doctored liquor carefully, she lay against the pillows in a posture of dreamless sleep. It was half an hour before her patience was rewarded. Then Thompson slipped stealthily into the room. Lucille flexed herself—a steel spring wound to its last notch.

Thompson approached swiftly, silently. He was beside her, leaning over her, his hand groping at her throat; a little exclamation of triumph as his finger pads touched the necklace. It was in his hands, and then the steel spring uncoiled with tremendous suddenness.

Taken by surprise before the vicious

It was after one of these rambles that she noticed signs of some impending change about the menage. One morning he suddenly walked toward her, entering the house to shortly enter her room.

"I am leaving today," he began abruptly, all the nature lover gone from his cold, stern manner. "Again I ask you to tell me where you put the papers."

"Then they haven't been found"—She stopped abruptly, realizing that her delight had revealed quite as much as his demand.

"I am sorry, Lucille, that you cannot see the folly of this. It is your last chance to tell me. It is your last chance to count me a friend. I am waiting."

She did not answer. Their eyes met and held, both filled with an unaltered purpose. Then Loubeque, without a word, left the room.

Nor did she see him again. That he had gone she knew from the laxness about the household among his servants. It gave her food for hope. She must escape—she must. She must escape before the iron grip of dreamy languor about the place became unbreakable.

But always when she wandered about she would encounter one of Loubeque's aids, always masked, always casually surprised at coming upon her, always urbane and polite, yet insistent upon turning her in an opposite direction. It got upon her nerves to such an extent that she finally took to the house and remained there. Every room was grated, and, though she knew they were not here for the purpose, they served it admirably.

Thompson seemed upon his master's departure to have lost poise as thoughts of the ruby necklace his fingers had touched seared itself upon his brain.

She recalled how he had served in her father's house so long with never a suspicion from any one that he was other than the perfect butler with a thought outside of his work. And then she recalled the incident of the necklace, always would she shudder at the recollection, then deliberately drive it from her mind.

It was the fourth day since the departure of the master of the place that standing beside her iron barred window, she saw the figure of a man toppling a rise in the distance and drawing swiftly nearer. There was something strangely familiar about him.

Slowly They Wandered Through the Gardens.

halted, staring through the slits of his mask into its clear depths. She trembled as she looked upon the flaming eyes so close to the reflection of her own face. Suddenly he tore the mask from him and tossed it to one side, closing his arm fiercely about her waist and drawing her soft cheek against his swarthy one. Together they stared into the ball, his eyes luminous with a wild love, hers moist with mingled sympathy and fear. Gently she disentangled his fingers, surprised at the numbness of them, the ease with which they responded to her will.

"You must go back," he murmured hoarsely. "I was mad to think of such a plan."

"I see a face," she murmured softly, her voice very low and far away. "I see a face and a scene that is different from the one you see. I see Manila—home—loved ones—loved ones grieving for a girl they think is lost to them forever. I see a man, the handsomest, bravest, truest man in the world—the man I love. He is disgraced. He is heartbroken. He is giving up the sword he loved, the sword he swore to never lift save in defense of his country's honor and the honor of a woman. He is giving up all that life holds dear to him, just as he has long since been bereft of all he cared to have from life—because I am imprisoned here."

"And I do not care for anything except his happiness. He is my whole world. I would sacrifice everything for him and for his honor." She turned swiftly, her hands reaching toward her neck and unfastening the ruby necklace. "Here, my friend, take this. It is all I have to give except my gratitude. Take it and help me to the man I love."

He took the necklace, turning it idly about in his hands, then hungrily lifted his eyes to her face, as though inanimate beauty was a thing of no account in comparison. He took her arm again and thoughtfully led her around devious paths to a deep, sunken well, before which he paused, a curious smile upon his lips.

"It is the 'wishing well,'" he murmured, "the wishing well before which all who have looked into the crystal ball and seen that their heart most desires must kneel and make re-promised his assistance, leaped light into the room. Reading his thought yet hearing nothing, she moved toward the window and lifted her tiny foot, though to mount a horse. His hand cupped about it. She vaulted to the casement and in a second had scrambled through.

By her side stood the man. For a moment he waited, then urged her forward. She was free, free, free! (Of course there were pickets to be passed but she had made one providential escape tonight, why not another?)

Out of sight of the building she paused and looked about her. How calm and peaceful and friendly appeared the night! The moon was full, the stars winked merrily at her, and ing her on her way. The touch of timid finger upon her arm brought her from her reveries.

"The horses wait, my lady."

Came a swift flashing of lights from the house they had left behind, a scurry of feet, the sound of voices, loud shrill, insistent. The Mexican seized her arm fiercely and half dragged her from off the court to a clump of bushes, where two horses stood saddled and bridled. In a second she was in the saddle, the man beside her.

The clatter of hoofs rang out upon the silence. Looking back, she caught glimpses of dark figures silhouetted against the tropical vegetation in the patio. A spurt of fire leaped out at them like a living thing. The Mexican muttered a guttural oath and urged his horse to more speed. Lucille bent over her horse's head, bent low for the whine of bullets was in the air about them.

Suddenly the Mexican grunted loudly. His hands shot high in the air, then the horse fairly ran from under him. Upon the ground he swayed second; then leaped against the shadow of a giant fingered cactus plant. Lucille sprang from her saddle and sought his side.

she lay against the pillows in a posture of dreamless sleep. It was half an hour before her patience was rewarded. Then Thompson slipped stealthily into the room. Lucille flexed herself—a steel spring wound to its last notch.

Thompson approached swiftly, silently. He was beside her, leaning over her, his hand groping at her throat; a little exclamation of triumph as his finger pads touched the necklace. It was in his hands, and then the steel spring uncoiled with tremendous suddenness.

Taken by surprise before the vicious fury of the girl's attack the butler staggered back. Before he could recover she was upon him, driving him toward the door. He lifted his hands to fend his face, then stopped abruptly as he staggered into his master, just entering the room.

Hugo Loubeque waited, watching the furious girl and the ruffled butler curiously. A smile curved his lips as he turned toward her.

"You object to the draft, I presume. I assure you it has no ill effects and will make the journey one of pleasure instead of weariness." Then he whirled the butler, his face hard as granite, his teeth clipping off each word like steel particles.

"What are you doing here?" "I came to see if the draft had taken effect," sulkily murmured the butler.

"By what authority?"

"Asking your pardon, sir, but I suggested it and was afraid it might have a bad effect. I grew to take an interest in Miss Lucille in Manila, sir, and did not wish"—

Loubeque frowned heavily, but cut him short with an impatient wave of his hand. Lucille felt a sudden impulse to tell him the truth, but conquered it swiftly. She could fight Thompson much easier than this man. She must keep her own counsel. The spy turned to her again.

"You did not take the draft?" "No."

"I assure you on my word as a gentleman that it will cause you no inconvenience. Further, I hoped not to be obliged to tell you that if you do not take it willingly you will be compelled to get it down."

She bent her head docilely. Resistance was out of the question, and, after all, she must save her strength to fight the big things. After a moment's hesitation, a shudder at the enticing colors shed from the stuff, she drained the glass.

Laughter, comfort, peace. She gave herself up to the drug with a prayer, a prayer she felt so certain would be heeded, that in her slumber a smile parted her lips, played about her countenance. And when she awoke she was at Loubeque's Mexican ranch.

Low, rambling houses of Spanish architecture dotted the great area which the curiously fantastic, wholly artistic fence inclosed. The grounds were laid out in orderly fashion, blooming like the garden of Eden with a riotous profusion of flowers and plants.

This was a new Loubeque she met there. Always had she associated him with the manner of her knowing him. Times he had been tender, other times he had been cruel, always was he crafty, cunning, courageous, a one ideal man. But now he seemed all poet, painter. She could hear the softened tones of his voice as, with some of his companions, he wandered about the grounds, tenderly explaining to them the history, the beauty of the flowers, the rare species he had imported for the place.

He seemed now he had served in her father's house so long with never a suspicion from any one that he was other than the perfect butler with a thought outside of his work. And then she recalled the incident of the necklace, always would she shudder at the recollection, then deliberately drive it from her mind.

It was the fourth day since the departure of the master of the place that standing beside her iron barred window, she saw the figure of a man toppling a rise in the distance and drawing swiftly nearer. There was something strangely familiar about him, something she seemed to recall. In slashed bolero, tight trousers and gold braided sombrero of straw, his long black hair waving gracefully to his shoulders, the man made an impressive figure as he fastened steady, undeviating eyes upon her window until she was positive he was looking at her for a purpose. Low voices hummed in conversation, then the man appeared before her, offering his arm.

"Senor Loubeque sent me that I might escort you about the grounds, might place myself at your disposal," he murmured.

Lucille drew away from him at mention of his master, but something in the meaning eyes behind the mask reassured her and she moved out into the patio. Here they passed Thompson, whose eyes darted a message of suspicion at them.

"He thinks all is not right," said the man quietly when they were out of sight. "Well," he added, with a low sigh, "he is right in his suspicion. I could not hope to fool that man. Only a little less wise is he than Hugo himself."

"Not right! Then you have come to help me?"

"I have come," he answered quietly. "because I could not help coming. I have come because since first I looked upon you—you will forgive me—there in the city home of Hugo, when I looked upon your face I have seen no other. I have come because I could not stay away. I have come against the will of the man to whom I owe everything, the man I love, because you called me, because"—

She touched his arm lightly with her fingers in mute appeal. Her woman's instinct told her that such a love as this might be turned to account.

Slowly they wandered through the beautiful gardens, speaking of what they saw, yet never touching upon the subject nearest both their hearts. Suddenly the man seemed unable to stand the strain longer, and she touched his arm sympathetically, but he drew away with a little cry of near pain.

"Come with me to the crystal ball," he cried, "and see the vision that has haunted my eyes so long a time. Come with me to the crystal and see the face that has made me forget my vows; forget the one I love and fear; forget everything save the desire for life that I may lay down to bring a smile to it. Come with me, lady of my heart."

Before the tempestuousness of his voice Lucille followed his lead. Gone from her was every thought of immediate escape. She saw that the man could not be handled easily; that she could not escape from him any more than she could from the other minions of the spy without the use of craft, and yet she felt a curious sympathy for him, pain that she must harm him.

Before the great crystal ball that was set upon the flagging beside the patio fountain, beside which stood the monstrous, hoary, gray palm tree, he tude. Take it and help me to the man, I love."

He took the necklace, turning it idly about in his hands, then hungrily lifted his eyes to her face, as though inanimate beauty was a thing of no account in comparison. He took her arm again and thoughtfully led her around devious paths to a deep, sunken well, before which he paused, a curious smile upon his lips.

"It is the 'wishing well,'" he murmured, "the wishing well before which all who have looked into the crystal ball and seen that their heart most desires must kneel and make request. It is the legend; but, ah!"— He turned away to hide the swift contortion of jealousy and pain that suffused his face.

She knelt beside the well, almost fearful of the magic powers he ascribed to it.

"Oh, wishing well, let me but hold in my hands the honor of my sweetheart that I may give it back to him! Let me but serve his happiness and I shall ask for nothing more. Do with me as you desire, but grant my only wish."

He touched her lightly upon the arm, and she rose obediently, her eyes glowing like jewels. Lightly he placed the ruby necklace about her neck.

"One look in your eyes," he said softly, his mellow voice breaking under the torment of what he knew to be a hopeless love, "is more beautiful, more rare, more precious to me than any jewel. Come!"

Slowly, silently, yet in perfect understanding, they moved back to the house.

CHAPTER XVII. A Girl With One Idea.

It was the following day that, leaning against the window grating of iron, she was astonished to find it bending before her. She looked more closely and was astonished to find that one bar had been cut cleanly through. She examined the remainder of the bars. They appeared absolutely untouched, but when she pulled harshly at them every one gave way. Ready made was her means of escape.

That night, fully dressed, she stood beside the window looking out over the moon splashed patio. A furtive figure detached itself from the shadows and crept toward her. Strangely enough it did not frighten her to recognize the butler.

She crouched in the opposite side of the room listening to the faint tinkle of snapping iron bars as the man detached the ends from their sockets. His head and shoulders appeared in the opening.

Breathlessly she watched his approach. There was nothing undecided about his movements. He was swift; he was certain; he was sure. Not a motion, not a step was wasted. He was almost over the bed when Lucille sprang from her hiding place behind the door.

Instantly he turned, his head darting from side to side like that of a giant reptile. He did not speak. Slowly his hands opened and closed, while a grin crossed his face, widened his mouth—a hideously inhuman grin. She tried to cry out, but her lips were frozen shut.

He had almost reached her side. With a gasp Lucille grasped a native vase that stood near and brought it down on his head with crushing force. As he sank to the floor with a moan there was a sound outside, and her mysterious friend, the lover who had patio. A spurt of fire leaped out at them like a living thing. The Mexican muttered a guttural oath and urged his horse to more speed. Lucille bent over her horse's head, bent low, for the whine of bullets was in the air about them.

Suddenly the Mexican grunted loudly. His hands shot high in the air; then the horse fairly ran from under him. Upon the ground he swayed a second; then leaped against the shadow of a giant fingered cactus plant. Lucille sprang from her saddle and sought his side.

Red, warm blood gushed from the wound in his chest. His eyes were glazing when she stooped and brushed her lips across his forehead.

"Go!" he muttered. "Go!" Then his voice took on the resonant tone of a scant day or less before. "It is the ripple of the wishing well, my lady. Go! Ride—to the one—your heart—desires."

He stiffened suddenly and a spurt of tears came from her eyes. Louder grew the shouts, the voices. The air was alive with long, darting flames. Loubeque's hive was swarming.

She leaped into the saddle once more and dug her heels into the horse's sides. Through the night she rode with the ripple of the wishing well in her ears.

Behind her, Lucille could hear the pursuit. Not a second could she spare for thought of regret.

Times, above the ringing of her horse's hoofs, she would hear the shouts of those behind her. Now and then a message of lead would whine its dreadful tale into her ears, but all these were growing fainter, less distinct with every leap of the animal she bestrode.

Hours, it seemed, she rode, with never the slightest slackening of the mad pace to which she originally set her mount. He was lathered with foam, but she had no pity on him. Her brain was fiercely chaotic, wild with the bloody memories of the night.

From now on she had every advantage. She was free and she knew where the stolen papers and documents were secreted in the mysterious house of inexplicable disappearing rooms and stairs. She had the diary of Hugo Loubeque in her possession, and she had the ruby necklace which was equivalent to vast wealth. She had the outward seeming of guilelessness, was girlish and delightfully effeminate, but she knew the power of the claws she had, and her eyes rested fondly on the revolver which she found in a holster attached to the Mexican's saddle, even as she urged her horse to greater speed.

Across the trackless plain she rode with only the moon and stars looking down upon her, a wild, eerie figure of a bareheaded girl. Behind the pursuit had died away and before there was nothing save a slender ribbon of water that the moon buried its face in contentedly.

She heard voices, low pitched, yet carrying far in the silence of the night. Instantly she drew rein and flung herself to the ground, listening intently. Creeping cautiously to a slight rise, she looked down upon an adobe shack, before which a little squad of barefooted Mexicans loafed idly, their brown hands lazily supporting old fashioned Springfield rifles, such as she recalled the soldiers of Uncle Sam to have carried in the old days.

From where she watched she suddenly noticed a stir among the men. From the interior of the shack stepped a gaudily dressed little Mexican, evidently an officer from the awkward romised his assistance, leaped lightly to the room. Reading his thoughts, at hearing nothing, she moved toward the window and lifted her tiny foot as though to mount a horse. His hands jumped about it. She vaulted to the pavement and in a second had scrambled through.

By her side stood the man. For a moment he waited, then urged her forward. She was free, free, free! Of course there were pickets to be passed, it she had made one providential escape tonight, why not another?

Out of sight of the building she rushed and looked about her. How dim and peaceful and friendly appeared the night! The moon was full, the stars winked merrily at her, urgsalutes accorded him by the tattered-millions gathered before the house. For some reason she could not analyze, Lucille listened eagerly, her breath coming in quick, eager gasps as she overheard their daring plot to cross the river and stampede the corral of an American ranchman. A little cry of delight came from her lips as she heard their allusions to the United States cavalry they must sift through before hoping for success.

Her eyes were glittering with excitement when she stole cautiously to the adobe shack, peering inside slowly and carefully before entering. She knew all their plans, and her blood was boiling; but she also knew from what they had said that they, too, would be on the lookout for any upset to the well laid plot.

From a chest in the corner, which she hurriedly overhauled, she drew a similar suit to the one the little leader had worn. It would just about fit her, and she must take no chances of trying to cross the Rio Grande attired as she was.

Swiftly she changed, for every moment now was precious to others as well as to herself. Daughter of General Sumpter Love, she was afire with rage at the way the Mexicans had spoken of the border patrol of her country, the presumption of the plan she had heard outlined. The gaudy costume fitted her beautifully, and the broad straw sombrero, with its weight of silver cording and tassels, made it easy for her feminine features to be unrecognizable even as it concealed her long hair.

She was well pleased with herself when again she mounted her horse. The beast had been ready to drop in his tracks any moment, and she had killed two birds with one stone while changing her costume. Cautiously toward the glittering ribbon of river she rode, her eyes always alert for any sign of the Mexican foraging party.

The horse hesitated at the bank of the stream, but Lucille boldly urged him forward.

"Hurrah! We're across!" she said to herself, as, dripping and disheveled, she stood upon the "right side of the Rio." Up and down the bank she looked for signs of the border patrol, but none was in sight. But in the distance she could make out a tiny speck.

The chances were it was one of the Mexicans. But something must be done if the ranchman was to be saved from the plot she had overheard. Fiercely she urged her mount toward the speck in the distance until her heart sank as she recognized the man for one of the plotters.

Hours it seemed to her she pursued the slinking figure until it joined with two others. Gradually, after a few miles journeying, a great blaze shot high in the air, a blaze punctuated by shots and wild cries.

The three men cruelly dashed their spurs into the sides of their horses.

g her on her way. The touch of a mild finger upon her arm brought her from her reveries.

"The horses wait, my lady." Came a swift flashing of lights from a house they had left behind, a scurrying of feet, the sound of voices, loud, shrill, insistent. The Mexican seized her arm fiercely and half dragged her from off the court to a clump of bushes where two horses stood saddled and bridled. In a second she was in the saddle, the man beside her.

The clatter of hoofs rang out upon a silence. Looking back, she caught glimpses of dark figures silhouetted against the tropical vegetation in the distance. A spurt of fire leaped out at them like a living thing. The Mexican muttered a guttural oath and urged his horse to more speed. Lucille bent over her horse's head, bent low, for the whine of bullets was in the air about them.

Suddenly the Mexican grunted loudly. His hands shot high in the air; then the horse fairly ran from under him. Upon the ground he swayed a moment; then leaped against the shadow of a giant fingered cactus plant. Lucille sprang from her saddle and caught his side.

Some Baby Facts.

A normal baby weighs seven to seven and one-half pounds at birth, fifteen pounds at five or six months and twenty-one pounds at twelve months. The baby should double its weight in six months and treble it at about twelve months. Its length at birth is twenty to twenty-one inches, at six months twenty-five to twenty-six inches, and at twelve months the length is twenty-eight to twenty-nine inches. Gains in weight are more rapid during the first six months. The average weekly gain is about four ounces. The best time to have a baby vaccinated is in its first year. If it is healthy it may be vaccinated at the end of the third month.—Health Bulletin.

The mountain of the Rigi, in Switzerland, commands a panorama of 400 miles in circumference, which includes the lovely lake of Lucerne, and is unsurpassed for beauty. The Rigi was known to only a few travelers in the eighteenth century, but after the peace of 1815 it became a resort for the curious, the first dwelling having been erected in 1814. Now many hotels are in a flourishing condition, and it is popular even in winter. There is a little chapel, with its walls covered with votive tablets, for many have been the victims in the ice gorges of this lofty peak.

Modernize your Kitchen

One by one the bugbears of housekeeping are being put to rout through the instrumentality of gas. The modern kitchen—which means the all-gas kitchen—is now a recognized part of the up-to-date home. The all-gas kitchen lightens labor. It means a clean, wholesome, sanitary kitchen, as there is no coal dust or ashes to be spread around, and it becomes a real pleasure to work in it. Every housewife desires to cook and heat water in the most economical way, in the quickest, most dependable way, with the least possible work.

The All-Gas way is the solution to the problem.

Handy Dairy Tool.

A very handy tool to have around where there are milk cans to be opened is shown by the accompanying illustration, says Popular Electricity.

This consists of a steel ring, A, and a bar, B, which drawn to an edge like a chisel, these two pieces being held together by a pin, C.

To remove the plug the ring is placed over the top of the can with the edge of the bar against the plug and the top of the can as shown, when by pressing down in the direction of the arrow the plug is pried out of the can.

This is much superior to the method often applied of knocking the plug with a hammer or tugging at it, for the plug is removed with very little effort.

Plant Trees.

Trees are not only an adornment to the farm premises, but they have also practical value not only for their wood, but for their shelter from the winds and shade from the burning sun.

Now is the time to plant them. If they be fruit trees each locality has its favorite varieties, and you should know them and plant only such as are adaptable. If it is windbreaks and shade you should know that the government experiments have proved that white pine, Norway spruce, Australian and Scotch pines and American arbutus have no superiors. These kinds grow rapidly and are not lacking in vigor or adaptability to thin soils, exposed situations and other adverse conditions. But do not plant evergreens exclusively about the home. Deciduous trees occupy a place in any scheme for farm improvement which

DIVERSIFIED FARMING.

An apple orchard in New York state, containing fifteen acres and 527 trees, has been the object of detailed study for two years by the United States department of agriculture. Accurate records were kept of the cost of spraying, barrels, seed for cover crops and other expenses. The orchard is over fifty years old, well located and is a part of a farm of 122 acres on which potatoes, wheat, beans, sheep and horses are raised. The department experts sum up their conclusions with the advice that—

"The cost of growing apples is lessened by growing them in connection with other farm crops and utilizing the man and horse labor on these other crops also."

In other words, the farming that usually pays best is the kind where the equipment and labor of both men and horses can be used all through the year and where the owner is not dependent on one sort of crop.

Diversified farming is not always the easiest, but it is the safest and usually the most profitable, even in this era of specialization.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE.

Danger of Contaminated Milk Spreading the Disease Overcome.

[Prepared by United States Department of Agriculture]

The anxiety that has been expressed in several quarters in regard to the effect upon human health of the present outbreak of the foot and mouth disease is regarded by government authorities as somewhat exaggerated. The most common fear is that the milk supply might become contaminated, but in view of the precautions that the local authorities in the infected areas are very generally taking, there is comparatively little danger of this. Milk from infected farms is not permitted to be shipped at all. The only danger is, therefore, that before the disease has manifested itself some infected milk might reach the market. For this reason experts in the United States department of agriculture recommend pasteurization. As a matter of fact, however, pasteurization is recommended by the department anyway for all milk that is not very high grade and from tuberculin tested cows.

It has been demonstrated by experiments which have been made in Dan-

DISCARD ROBBER HENS.

Unprofitable Fowls Should Be Eliminated From the Flock.

[Prepared by Cornell department of poultry husbandry.]

This winter when the prices of grain are soaring it is well to consider whether there are hens in the flock that are consuming more feed than the returns in the egg basket warrant. Frequently 25 to 50 per cent of the birds have been eliminated from flocks by members of the department of poultry husbandry at Cornell without reducing the total daily egg yield. The birds that were eliminated were robber hens, because they reduced the profits from the remainder of the flock, which would have required less labor, less feed and less house room. The time to select hens for breeding purposes is in the fall rather than in the spring. At this time only the more productive individuals are laying, and the characteristics that distinguish the productive from the unproductive are more easily seen. These characteristics are the condition of the molt, the shape of the body, the size and color of the comb, the color of the shanks and the actions of the birds. A study of the three year trap nest records of many White Leghorn fowls at Cornell shows that the most productive fowls, if selected at the end of the first year's laying, will be likely to lay an average production equal to the average egg yield of the entire flock in the first year. These records also show that a wise selection of the most desirable individuals at the end of the second year will lay on the average as many eggs per bird as the entire flock did per bird in the second year. Especially high producing individuals of the first year are likely to lay more eggs in the third year than they did in the second year. When farmers realize these facts a great many robber hens will be used for Sunday dinners. It is important that the best individuals should be selected and kept for not less than two or three years. These

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Good farming, good homes and thrif are coupled with the little farm idea. As small places are apt to have a variety of produce, they stimulate good selling methods. They are a means of developing direct marketing plans in which consumers pay reduced prices for kitchen supplies, while producers receive more than wholesale rates.

A reader who recently bought a ten acre farm a mile and a half from town asks me to make up an outline for the successful management of his little place. He wishes to keep a team of horses, two or more cows, some poultry and have as wide a diversity of production as possible in order to distribute labor evenly.

In nearly every case persons taking small farms are inspired with the need of diversified crops, so that if one thing fails there are other products to keep up the income. I will say right here that many ten acre tracts are maintaining several cows and considerable other live stock, besides allowing room enough for a large production of vegetables and fruit.

A farm of this size may devote two acres to pasture, three acres to corn, two acres to a commercial garden, one acre to orchard, one acre to root crop and the tenth acre to buildings, poultry plant, etc. This arrangement will enable the owner to alternate the three acres of ground devoted to corn with the three used for garden and root crops. These products should be grown in rotation not only for the purpose of keeping up soil fertility, but as a means of fighting insect pests.

In the acre devoted to orchard there may be about fifty trees, which should include at least apples, pears and cherries. There will then be room for about 200 raspberry and currant bushes among the trees and around the edge of the orchard. The root crops should include carrots, beets, rutabagas and other things of the kind. The three acres of corn will supply roughage for six or eight head of stock, and between the rows rape should be sown so that its favorite varieties, and you should know them and plant only such as are adaptable. If it is windbreaks and shade you should know that the government experiments have proved that white pine, Norway spruce, Australian and Scotch pines and American arbutus have no superiors. These kinds grow rapidly and are not lacking in vigor or adaptability to thin soils, exposed situations and other adverse conditions. But do not plant evergreens exclusively about the home. Deciduous trees occupy a place in any scheme for farm improvement which the evergreens alone do not and cannot fill. Hard or soft maples, elder and elm, where they are suitable, should not be overlooked.

Transplanted Plants.

Give transplanted plants plenty of time to recoup. Do not water them too much or the soil will become sour and further retard the growth of the plant. Do not place in too warm a window, for until the growth starts they want to be in a shady place.

Round the Circle.

The object of the average normal nation is to have more prosperity to raise more taxes to build more battle-ships to seek more markets to sell more goods to have more prosperity to raise more taxes to build more battle-ships to seek more markets to sell more goods to have more prosperity and so on until something unforeseen happens.

local authorities in the infected areas are very generally taking, there is comparatively little danger of this. Milk from infected farms is not permitted to be shipped at all. The only danger is, therefore, that before the disease has manifested itself some infected milk might reach the market. For this reason experts in the United States department of agriculture recommend pasteurization. As a matter of fact, however, pasteurization is recommended by the department anyway for all milk that is not very high grade and from tuberculin tested cows.

It has been demonstrated by experiments which have been made in Denmark and Germany that pasteurization will serve as a safeguard against contagion from the foot and mouth disease just as readily as it does against typhoid fever, but in any event it must be thoroughly done. The milk must be heated to 145 degrees F. and held at this temperature for thirty minutes.

In this country the foot and mouth disease has been so rare that there are few recorded cases of its transmission to human beings. In 1902 a few cases were reported in New England, and in 1908 in a few instances eruptions were found in the mouths of children which were believed to have been caused by contaminated milk. In both of these outbreaks the sale of milk was stopped as soon as the disease was found among the cattle. As long, therefore, as the disease can be confined by rigid quarantine to certain specified areas the danger from this source is very small. Should the pestilence spread all over this country and become as general as it has been at various times in larger areas in Europe the problem would become more serious. Under any circumstances, however, pasteurization would be an efficient remedy. Where pasteurization is not possible and where there is any reason to suspect that the disease may exist the precaution of boiling milk might be advisable.

To Tighten Wagon Tires.

A southern Iowa farmer, says the Farm Progress, uses a very ingenious scheme for tightening loose wagon tires. As is often the case with all farmers, this man is troubled with loose tires on some of his wagons, which when the weather becomes wet again are perfectly tight. He takes a long, tapering cold chisel (an old buggy spring would answer admirably) and drives it between the filler and tire directly over a spoke. He then makes a wedge of some hard wood, which he drives in as tightly as possible beside the chisel. The chisel is then driven out and the wedge cut off evenly on both sides, and the job is done.

Any one who has never tried this would be surprised at the degree of "set" that can be given to tires by thus wedging them. In fact, until the wedges loosen by wear they are almost as tight as if set by the usual method.

production equal to the average egg yield of the entire flock in the first year. These records also show that a wise selection of the most desirable individuals at the end of the second year will lay on the average as many eggs per bird as the entire flock did per bird in the second year. Especially high producing individuals of the first year are likely to lay more eggs in the third year than they did in the second year. When farmers realize these facts a great many robber hens will be used for Sunday dinners. It is important that the best individuals should be selected and kept for not less than two or three years. These older fowls have proved to be most desirable for breeding purposes. They lay larger eggs, are in better condition for breeding in the spring than pullets and show by their ability to lay and to remain vigorous that they have inherited a tendency to long life and vitality. These are some of the characteristics that must be perpetuated in breeding hens for high egg production.

The selection of males for breeding purposes is of as great importance as the selection of females. Not more than two or three males out of every hundred reared usually need to be retained for breeders. Males differ as widely in vigor and breeding value as do females. They can be graded for quality as easily and as accurately as pullets or hens. Pullets that fail to lay before late winter or early spring should be discarded as breeders.

LIVE STOCK AND DAIRY.

The duty of the hour for the individual farmer is to keep the closest watch upon his home herd for any outbreak of foot and mouth disease. If any suspicious case develops it should be immediately reported to the local authorities.

The dirty feed pail is the killer of the calf. There is no reason to doubt that the great majority of calves which die before they are two months old are killed because of poisoning or indigestion, traceable to unclean feed pails. If it is worth attempting to raise calves, surely it is worth while to have the utensils thoroughly clean.

Cows giving milk consume about twice as much water as those not giving milk. One of the experiment stations found that the average amount of water consumed for each pound of milk produced was a little over four and one-half pounds.

Dairy cows do not need a great amount of exercise. Their business is producing milk, and their milk making machinery will exercise itself if it is given plenty of good material with which to work.

When you think of buying another cow or two consider whether or not you could not make more money by spending the money on better care of the cows you already possess.

crops. These products should be grown in rotation not only for the purpose of keeping up soil fertility, but as means of fighting insect pests.

There will then be room for about 200 raspberry and currant bushes among the trees and around the edge of the orchard. The root crops should include carrots, beets, rutabagas and other things of the kind. The three acres of corn will supply roughage for six or eight head of stock, and between the rows rape should be sown so that after the grain has been harvested a number of hogs may graze through it all months. The plowing can be done before the ground freezes. There will be corn enough to fatten the hogs for the winter market and to feed the horses besides supplying part of the poultry rations.

After crops of lettuce, beans, earl potatoes, onions, peas and radishes have been taken off early in the season the garden can be fitted for successful crops, such as cabbage, tomatoes, celery, sweet corn and late potatoes. This program of double cropping can be widely varied. It enables a person to raise twice as much stuff as the ordinary garden produces, and as there is an extra amount of cultivation the soil does not wear out. So far as possible plowing and fertilizing should be done in the fall.

There should be earnings about as follows: Poultry plant for 200 hens $300; three cows, $400; ten hogs, $150 garden produce, $400; fruit, $250; one horse raised each year, $150; total, $1,650. Each of these estimates of earnings may be enlarged a little, as they are conservative. A little additional income may be gained from the sale of calves. It would also be possible to clean up some money by keeping pigeons. An incubator run in connection with the poultry plant ought to increase the earnings of that department a hundred or two. A gross income of around $2,000 is not unreasonable. There must be paid out about $500 for help in the garden and for mill stuffs for the cows and poultry. If cream is sold or butter made there will be a considerable amount of skimmed milk for the hogs and chickens.

This cannot be more than a suggestive outline for the guidance of people who are taking little farms. The problem will not be exactly the same in any two cases, and the owner of the farm must figure out methods for himself. A much wider diversity of production is feasible. For instance, twenty or thirty colonies of bees do not take up any room worth speaking about, but they may add $300 to $500 to the yearly income. It will be found that the above estimate of possible earnings in orchard and garden is low.

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Good farming, good homes and thrift coupled with the little farm idea. Small places are apt to have a variety of produce, they stimulate good selling methods. They are a means of developing direct marketing plans by which consumers pay reduced prices for kitchen supplies, while producers receive more than wholesale rates.

A reader who recently bought a ten acre farm a mile and a half from town asks me to make up an outline for the successful management of his little place. He wishes to keep a team of horses, two or more cows, some poultry and have as wide a diversity of production as possible in order to distribute labor evenly.

In nearly every case persons taking small farms are inspired with the need of diversified crops, so that if one crop fails there are other products to step up the income. I will say right here that many ten acre tracts are maintaining several cows and consid-

HATS FOR SPRING.

Millinery Exploited In South Forecasts Spring Styles.

GOWNS ARE OF VARIED SHAPES

Flowers and Fruits Make Artistic Trimmings—Fantastically Shaped Novelties In Feathers and Leather Featured—Ribbons to Be Popular.

Already spring models are being shown by milliners in the fashion centers, and the pleasure seekers who throng the southern resorts are wearing modish headgear whose lines and trimmings forecast the intentions of millinery designers in regard to our spring hats.

In discussing the trimmings for spring hats the Millinery Trade Review says:

"Flowers enter largely into the present trimming scheme, which is characteristic of spring and summer hats, and, while trimmings are comparatively simple, just the thing which best suits the hat it is to adorn is by far in best taste.

"At present, early spring lines show small flowers and fruits used in combination or separately. For instance, a clever emerald green hat features trimmings of apples and apple blossoms in their natural shades, while another of tan barnyard straw braid is charmingly trimmed with a wreath of highly colored flat velvet flowers and fruit, giving an appearance of being appliqued.

"A single cluster of vivid cherries droops from the brim of a black sailor, while a very clever idea in the use of flowers is shown in a delicately made wreath of hand made silk flowers, outlining the edge of a blue shadow lace veil. A similar wreath attaches the veil to the hat. Wreaths made of very

HOW TO FRAME PICTURES.

Water color pictures usually look well in narrow gilt frames. A narrow mat of cream, white or gilt usually brings out the colors. Often, however, a silver gray or green frame, sometimes one of light brown, flat and not heavy in appearance, is used to good advantage.

The tendency now is to frame most pictures with little or no mats. The color and quality of prints, either colored, brown or black, are best brought out with the frame set close against the print. When a mat must be used have it in a color that harmonizes with the tone of the picture.

A photograph printed in sepia tones or any of the sepia prints is best framed in brown wood. Usually, according to present day standards, a flat simple frame looks best, although one of carved wood or turned wood can be used. Sometimes the Florentine wood frames that travelers to Florence buy and bring home by the yard can be effectively used on brown prints. They are especially in keeping on a copy of some old Italian picture in brown. But usually a simple, unornamented frame is more effective.

DUSTING A ROOM.

There's No Necessity to Make This Work Unpleasant Drudgery.

The invention of the dustless duster has helped to solve the problem of how to get the dust out of the house without raising more than dusting is worth.

But the dustless duster must be watched and washed and renewed often to afford the satisfaction it ought, and even then a good going over of the house in the old fashioned way is still necessary.

When you begin to dust raise the windows. Then wash washable bric-a-brac in tepid water and a little white soap and dry on soft cheesecloth. Have a place, say the sofa, already dusted and in order, where you may put the pieces and cover them over.

Have sheets made of two lengths of gingham or calico—anything that is cheap and washable—to cover the furniture, and, after washing the small bric-a-brac or dusting it off and covering it up, go after the other pieces of furniture. Large squares of outing flannel for this purpose serve well if you haven't dustless dusters.

It isn't necessary to use furniture polish every week on good furniture, or once a month even.

A quick washing off with slightly soapy water and cheesecloth sometimes is beneficial for furniture in the grimy city. Follow with furniture polish, after which rub hard with fresh cheesecloth.

The last thing to do in a room is to wipe up the floors. When this is done it is time to begin to put the cleaned and dusted articles back in their places.

Fancy Door Porters.

Door porters are useful in keeping doors open. The most convenient kind for the bedroom door is the little modern maid—a doll's head fastened to a body filled with sand and dressed in black with white cap and apron. She is fastened to a long loop of ribbon.

A FAMILY REMEDY FOR MANY YEARS

Used "Fruit-a-lives" With The Best of Results.

GEORGE MCKAY Esq.

KIPPEN, ONT., June 17th, 1913. "I have been using 'Fruit-a-lives' as a family remedy for many years. They are the best medicine I have ever tried. 'Fruit-a-lives' do me the most good—they never gripe and their action is pleasant.

"I have used them for Indigestion and Constipation with the best results, and I heartily recommend them to anyone similarly afflicted.

These troubles have left me completely and I give 'Fruit-a-lives' full credit for all this. A nicer pill a man cannot take."

GEORGE MCKAY.

The enormous demand for "Fruit-a-lives" is steadily increasing, due to the fact that this wonderful fruit medicine gives prompt relief in all cases of Indigestion, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Rheumatism, Chronic Headaches, and Neuralgia, and all Kidney and Bladder Troubles.

tiny flowers and fruits may encircle the crown or brim, not a little depending on the shape of the hat.

"Gladioluses of leather are also quite smart. Leather quills and buckles for use in trimming tailored hats are noted. Quills, pheasant tails and various fantastically shapel novelties are shown developed of burned ostrich, peacock and vulture. Beads of vivid colorings are being pressed into service and make especially clever trimmings for tailored panamas.

"Ribbons are being extensively used, both in narrow and wide widths. Among those given the preference are faille, moire, taffeta and ottoman, as well as a fair quantity of velvet. High wired loops or flat tailored bows are shown, as are rosettes and cabochons. Streamers also make the use of ribbon a feature. Veils also come in for their share of prominence, a number of spring models showing hats with the veil attached.

"These may be of fine brussels net or shadow lace, the first named being edged with narrow ribbon and the last having wreaths of handmade flowers outlining the lower edge."

Hats shown in the exhibitions of models for spring include many attractive turbans. One which was designed for wear at Palm Beach is pictured here. It is of white satin and braid, with the left side curving up. A narrow black satin piping incircles the brim. Two hat pompons of black and white horsehair are affixed to the side.

Economy In Work Aprons.

Do not throw away faded or outgrown house dresses. Cut off the waists, launder the skirts and use them to cover your good skirts when doing housework.

A shirring tape may be run through the belt and gathered tightly around the top of the skirt banger, so as to keep out the dust.

Old wrappers can also be used for covering one piece dresses. Do not cut off the top of the wrapper, but run in a tape at the top and at the bottom.

Figs For Children.

A safe laxative for children is two soaked figs that have remained in a little water overnight with some sugar. These are eaten in the morning before breakfast. The seeds exert a stimulating effect on the alimentary canal and help to produce the desired effect.

Quick Changes.

"At 10 o'clock to-morrow morning I will be prepared to answer your proposal of marriage."

"Why this delay?"

"It gives me time to play fair with another suitor. If he doesn't come across when he hears of your offer, I'll take you."

ACCORDION PLAITED GOWN

SERGE AND SATIN DRESS.

Accordion plaiting is used extensively in the designing of many new gowns, even those for street wear. It is very effectively utilized in the making of the pictured gown of navy blue serge which is combined with black satin. The long tunic of accordion plaited serge falls over a plain skirt of satin. The bolero bodice has a pointed satin vest. Worn with it are collars and cuffs of white handkerchief linen adorned with tiny pearl buttons.

Panned Chicken.

Select chickens four or five months old. After dressing cut them through the middle of the back, wash thoroughly, wipe and rub inside with salt. Pour an inch of boiling water into a roasting pan with three heaping tablespoonsful of butter, lay the chickens flat, with breasts uppermost. Cover tightly and watch carefully, basting and adding water when needed. In an ordinary oven an hour and a quarter is sufficient for cooking them. When ready for the table spread with hot butter. Make gravy as for any chicken dish.

WHITE VOILE GOWN.

Already manufacturers and fashion designers are showing the spring models. An advance suggestion for the commencement season is the garment pictured here. It is of white cotton voile, with bolero bodice. The long, circular tunic is handsomely embroidered and edged with lace. A row of pearl buttons trims the costume from the V shaped neck to the hem of the tunic. A soft girdle of pink satin is worn with it. A gown of this sort may be made up for the young girl who needs a frock for dancing class. Any other fabric may be substituted for the voile.

WHEN IT RAINS.

Watch the Cellar, as Dampness is Dangerous on Walls or Floors.

If rain gets into the cellar or there is any leakage whatever to cause dampness have it attended to at once. A damp cellar, aside from being dangerous, will ruin practically all foods. Large boxes of lime should be placed in the cellar, and lime should be sprinkled over the floor. For several days there should remain in the cellar cans of chloride of lime in water. This purifies the air. Provide dry boxes for fruit, which should be raised from the floor by bricks. One brick may be placed under each corner of the box. Even barrels should rest on bricks, or, better still, should be set on long pieces of scantling.

A swinging shelf placed on iron hooks away from the wall is excellent for holding baskets of onions, potatoes, tomatoes and other things that one wants within easy reach. When the side walls, ceiling and floor of a cellar have been swept and the shelves carefully cleaned you may apply a good coat of whitewash or two of them if necessary. This finished, wipe up the floor, throw open the windows, and the cellar will at once smell sweet and wholesome. Strictly speaking, cleaning the cellar is a man's work and should not be undertaken by a woman unless in case of dire necessity, but it is essential that a woman superintend the task. A mere man is apt to leave dirt in the corners and cobwebs in out of the way places.

Vast Forests of Alaska.
We hear much concerning the rapid disappearance of our forests. The vast timbered area of the eastern and central portions of the United States is fast being transformed into a woodless country, becoming very thickly populated, and doubtless will never grow much timber again. In Alaska, which is one of our territories, the timber area is estimated to be somewhere near 30 per cent of the entire land, and there is considerably more than 100,000,000 acres of good woodland, with timber that is of such a value its real worth cannot be estimated. It will require years to even make any marked impression on such a vast forest.—Philadelphia North American.

Mamma's Kiss.
This pretty child story is from the French:
A mother tells her little girl that because she has been naughty she will not kiss her for a week. Before two days have gone by the child's lips hunger so for her mother's kiss that she begs her not to punish her any more. The mother says: "No, my dear. I told you that I should not kiss you, and I must keep my word."
"But, mamma, mamma," says the little girl, "would it be breaking your word if you should kiss me just once tonight when I'm asleep?"

HOCKEY.
Friday evening of last week a game of hockey was played between the senior teams of Napanee and Deseronto, on the Napanee rink. The weather was ideal from the spectator's point of view, but it was a trifle mild for the players, as the ice was soft, and soft ice is not conducive to speed in a hockey match. However, the match was a good one and the large crowd of spectators seemed to enjoy themselves immensely. The result was a win for the Napanee boys by a score of 10-4. Good clean hockey was played from start to finish, and no unnecessary roughness was indulged in. This is as it should be, as the game of hockey is good sport. Following are the players:
Napanee—Goal, H. Steacy; Right Defence, George Grange; Left Defence, W. McLaughlin; Rover, H. Schermehorn; Centre, J. Soby; Left Wing, T. Blute; Right Wing, C. Vanalstine.

GIRLS PLAY HOCKEY.
The second hockey match between the junior and senior girls teams was played on Saturday night and this time the junior girls were victorious, winning by a score of 2 to 1. The seniors were first to score, after about ten minutes play Edna VanLuvén shot the puck and scored. However, the juniors were not long in tying it. Evelyn Rockwell and Carman Mills worked the puck up the ice, Evelyn receiving the pass, scored the first for the juniors. In the second half the play was evenly divided. The juniors scored in this half. Carman Mills received the puck after Margaret McConachie had lost it and shot, the puck bounding over Miss Nesbitt's stick. The juniors had another "near" goal in this half. Leah Vanalstine shot the puck and it hit the iron post and remained there for some seconds. The players of both teams were under the impression that the referee's whistle had blown. The seniors had the puck in the mouth of the junior goal, but were unable to score. The game was called and the score stood two to one in favor of the juniors. "Ken" Cabridge and "Jack" Soby acted as umpires in an impartial manner. The juniors presented a much stronger team and they played more combination. Margaret McConachie is a tower of strength to the defence, while Leah Vanalstine, although small, has the faculty of always being in the right place. The senior girls, although beaten, will give a good account of themselves. Their team work was broken up by the back-checking of the juniors. For the losers, Dorothy Reeve and Elsie Woodcock played good hockey. Carman Mills and Evelyn Rockwell were the best of the winners, while L. Hartman in goal stopped some good shots. Through the kindness of Frederick Hosey the juniors were tendered a banquet after the game, at Caton's restaurant. Speeches were made by Captain Carman Mills, Fred. Hosey, J. Soby and W. McLaughlin.

Corpuscles in Normal Blood.

Normally there are approximately 5,000,000 red blood corpuscles in the cubic millimeter. The number is temporarily diminished during fatigue and after the ingestion of much fluid. Fasting and profuse sweating increase the number of red blood cells by concentrating the blood. In high altitudes the number is also increased. There are 5,000 to 10,000 white cells in the cubic millimeter, the ratio of white to red cells being about 1 to 500. In health the blood amounts to about one-thirteenth of the body weight.
